TEN HURT

CROWDS IN RUSH FOR TIGERS BATTLE

"Gr-r-r-rr!"

"Rah—Rah—Rah!"

With these belligerent sentiments 52,000 football fans headed for the Stadium today to see Harvard and Princeton celebrate Armistice Day with the battle of their gridiron lives.

Prospects that this would be the final football game for an indefinite period between the Tiger and the Crimson put even extra zest into the occasion.

Harvard complains that Princeton played rough football were heard after the game that the Tiger won, 18 to 3, in the Palmer Stadium at Princeton last year.

Which recalls that complaints of Dartmouth roughness were heard when Harvard broke with Dartmouth ten years ago.

Betting around town the night before and during the morning hours stood at 10 to 9 on Harvard. Even in the Crimson's home territory Harvard was conceded only those slight betting odds, so profound was the respect for the Tiger's teeth and claws.

Tickets were scarcer than hips on a snake, and speculators' prices were correspondingly high.

Good seats were not in the market. Twenty-five dollars was asked without a blush for any pair of th different seats.

Happy was the chap with a ticket. Twice happy was he who had two tickets and the girl of his choice. The girl herself, in such case, was too thrilled for ordinary expression.

WHISKEY LANDED IN NAHANT

Whiskey runners landed more than $50,000 in high grade whiskies at Bass Point, Nahant, today.

The booze was landed from a British auxiliary two-master and rushed away in automobiles.

Bootleggers in Lynn and Nahant bragged today they had pulled off the biggest whiskey deal of the year in Massachusetts. They offered for sale a choice of Haig & Haig Scotch, Three Star Hennessy brandy, Rock and Rye whiskey and Canadian Club rye.

According to eyewitnesses, the booze was brought from the schooner in small boats after an exchange of flashlight signals with men who drove to the shore with automobiles. The whiskey runners laughed and smoked as they loaded the cases of wet goods into the machines. Then they drove away, scattering to various sections of Nahant and Lynn.

Nahant citizens were indignant over the affair and charged neglect on the part of dry officers. They said the schooner had landed four days ago. Police officials of Lynn and Nahant are working on the case and maintain that much of the contraband went to some of the "beat cellers" in Nahant.

JARDINE ADMITS CONFINING GIRL NETTED HIM $10,000 YEARLY

KNEW "ONLY ALUM COULD PREVENT HER MARRYING"

Gardiner, who is fighting in Suffolk Superior Court for the removal of William F. Jardine as guardian, told the American that he would appear in the criminal courts regardless of the outcome of the present case, now being heard by G. A. A. Pearey as master.

GIRL LIFOUGHT TO ESCAPE.

Further sensations were promised by the uncle who asserted:

"Jardine expects to get away with the claim that Dorothy is a voluntary patient. We will bring the taxi driver to tell on the stand how she fought to escape from the machine. There will be other surprises."

Superintendent Packard, discussing Miss Gordon today, said:

"Dorothy was twice committed to the hospital, once in December, 1916, and again on March 21. On each occasion she signed the application for her admission.

"Shortly after her first voluntary commitment she was committed on the order of a judge of a court. Two physicians competent to pass upon her condition made a special study of the girl and reported their finding to the judge, whereupon he made out the necessary legal papers ordering her confinement.

TREATED KINDLY.

"Jardine treats Miss Gordon with kindness visits her frequently at the hospital and appears to have the interests of the girl at heart.

"Were the girl's uncle, John Gardiner, to succeed in his effort to wrest the guardianship from Jardine, he would keep Dorothy in the hospital and would act just as Jardine has acted.

He explained that in the case of any patient at the asylum, release could be obtained with almost no formality. If the guardian or friend of the patient asked for the patient's release it was at once effected, providing Dr. Packard was satisfied that the friend or guardian had means to otherwise care for the patient.

No objection is made to the removal of patients from the McLean Hospital, Dr. Packard said, except where the patient has a homicidal mania.

The statement of Dr. Packard came after Jardine had admitted on the witness stand that he had benefitted by Dorothy's commitment.

He admitted that he has benefitted to the extent of $50 a month rent which he charges Dorothy for the room she has never seen, and $4,500 a year which he receives from the estate of Dorothy for his office as guardian.

He also admitted that if she had not been placed in the asylum at that time he would not receive the $5,000 a year, which he is paid as president of the Gordon Supply Company, in which most of Dorothy's money is tied up. In addition, Jardine admitted "that I would have lost charge of Dorothy's property."

These admissions were only part of a long series of amazing admissions made by the guardian of the young heiress during another long day of grilling by Attorney John L. Sheehan.

After declaring that he had prevented Dorothy from marrying the man with whom she had planned to elope, Jardine admitted that he knew that there was no "power on earth that could prevent Dorothy from marrying the man of her choice when she became twenty-one years old except THE INSANE ASYLUM."

"The insane asylum has prevented her from marrying the man of her choice, hasn't it?" asked Attorney Sheehan.

"Yes," answered Jardine, "but by no act of mine."

Questioned as to why he did not turn over Dorothy's property to her on her twenty-first birthday, Jardine revealed the fact that the girl had pushed to the office of her attorney on the day she became twenty-one. What she went for he said had not been revealed to him.

It developed during the testimony that Dorothy's lawyer then is the lawyer now defending Jardine in the hearing before Auditor G. A. A. Pearey in which John D. Gardiner of Baldwin, Long Island, is trying to oust Jardine.

"Don't you think it peculiar that she should go immediately to her attorney on the day she was twenty-one?" asked Attorney Sheehan.

"She is your attorney, too, isn't she?" asked Attorney Sheehan.

This aroused laughter among the spectators which was joined in when Jardine said:

"I AM THE ESTATE."

Another thrill swept through the courtroom when Attorney Sheehan produced a little package of twenty-two letters written to Dorothy by Willard Newell, an Tech student, whom she told her guardian, she used to marry. The letters were tied up with a little piece of delicate pink ribbon.

There was some argument between the opposing lawyers as to whether or not Attorney Sheehan would be allowed to read the letters before introducing them as evidence. Finally, Attorney Sheehan grabbed up the letters, and, with a dramatic flourish, tossed them onto the table, saying: "There they are. They will go in as evidence."

Attorney Sheehan read them into the records. They were not the kind of letters that breath slushy sentiment, but one of them contained a reference to Dorothy's twenty-first birthday that was brought out as very significant.

Newell asked Dorothy if she knew how many days it would be until her next birthday and said "I'll bet you know now how many days it is."

That letter was written just eighty-three days before Dorothy's twenty-first birthday. Attorney Sheehan contended that it had a deep meaning. Jardine would not admit that it did.

GIRL PLANNED TO ELOPE.

Among the other admissions made by Jardine was the revelation that Dorothy and Ellis Jardine of Dorchester had planned to elope. That was in November, 1920, just a short time before she was to become twenty-one years old. He admitted that he stopped Dorothy from eloping, and said that he was determined she should not elope. He also declared that he would never give his consent to marry a Jardine.

Referring back to the first time that Dorothy was in the McLean Asylum, in 1916, Jardine admitted that he had given orders that would prevent her dearest friends, her loved ones, sweetheart, teachers—or even her pastor—from seeing her. He said that he was to be the judge of who should see her.

Attorney Sheehan here grilled Jardine closely.

Q.—What orders did you give the asylum the first time Dorothy was there? A.—That she was to receive the best care money could buy.

Q.—What money; hers? A.—Yes.

Q.—You were paying $75 a week then? A.—No.

Q.—Oh, they have raised the ante now? A.—Yes.

Q.—If Dorothy had been married at 21 she would have saved $75 a week, wouldn't she? A.—She might have.

Q.—Did you give any other orders? A.—To let her see no one without my permission.

Q.—So if her dearest friend, her pastor or her teacher came to see her they could not? A.—Not without coming to see me.

Q.—You say that was for Dorothy's interest? A.—Yes.

Q.—How do you know? A.—Persons would come out of curiosity to see her.

Q.—How about those who came for her good? A.—They could communicate through me.

BARRED GIRL'S CHUM.

Q.—Anyone else? A.—Two or three women. They did not give their names.

Q.—Mightn't they have been productive of some good? A.—They wouldn't.

Q.—How do you know? A.—She was in no condition to see them. The condition she was in when I saw her proved that.

Q.—You thought your presence a help to her? A.—Yes.

Q.—Mightn't the presence of some other person been a help to her, A.—Yes.

Q.—Wouldn't the presence of a person she loved have been of help? A.—I didn't know of anyone she loved.

Q.—These women might have been there, to get her out? A.—They might have.

Q.—Don't know you could be remove[illegible]ian? A.—Yes, for just cau[illegible].

Q.—You [illegible] had friends you did not kn[illegible].

Q.—She has had friends she had made since you knew her? A.—I don't know.

Q.—You know she had a girl friend in Baldwin, Long Island, who came here to see her? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did she see her? A.—No.

Q.—Was your order the reason? A.—Yes.

Attorney Sheehan showed Mr. Jardine a photograph taken when Dorothy was about twelve years old. In the picture was a boy and four or five girls. Mr. Jardine identified one of the girls as Dorothy and the boy as her cousin, Jack Gardiner, Jr., or "Little Jack" as referred to in the hearing.

Q.—Dorothy would not have been helped by having visitors while in the asylum, would she? A.—No, visitors made her worse.

Q.—Yet you went out and visited her and took your wife and your sister and sometimes your mother, didn't you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Knowing visitors made the girl worse, yet you took your people out to see her, didn't you? A.—I did.

Q.—You are consistent aren't you? A.—I am very consistent.

Q.—Didn't you just say that it made Dorothy worse to have visitors? A.—I did.

SAW JARDINES ONLY.

Q.—But you went? A.—I meant for her to have strangers visit her.

Q.—Oh, if you knew the people that went and they were not strangers, you were willing for them to go to visit Dorothy. A.—I was.

Q.—Yet you sent orders to keep all people away from Dorothy? A.—I did.

Q.—In fact, it was pretty near a closed corporation, you, your family and Dorothy, wasn't it? A.—I won't say that.

Q.—You were in this guardianship to further your own personal interests, were you not? A.—I deny that.

Attorney Sheehan then introduced the letter referring to the busy days before vacation, in which Newell admits he has to worry over but one thing, his business. The letter is a carefree epistle, and he speaks of coming up North sometime in June and of his shoulders being lame, and of his loss of weight.

KNEW NEWELL WAS COMING.

Resuming the questioning, Attorney Sheehan, referring to the letter and its contents, asked:

Q.—What college was Wilton Jardine at? A.—I do not know.

THREE PRINCIPALS IN ASYLUM DRAMA

Frank admissions by Jardine of his self-interest in confining his ward continue to be amazing.

lances. Firemen's services were not needed, however, but two of the ambulances were used to take victims to hospitals.

The tank of compressed gas was being out on an automobile of Robert Boyd, who was sitting in the car waiting for the workmen to get the tank installed.

WINDOWS SHATTERED.

There was a roar and a flash of flame. All windows of the Hawthorne place were blown out. Windows of automobile places on either side of the service station were shattered.

The top of Boyd's automobile was blown off. Boyd was seriously burned on the head and face.

Furniture and fittings in the Hawthorne place were damaged.

Occupants of adjoining buildings rushed in and gave first aid to the injured. Then the ambulances arrived and the more seriously hurt were taken to hospitals. Firemen helped the police to restore order.

START INVESTIGATION.

Frank Wedger, State chemist, is investigating the ruins. He arrived less than an hour after the blast. State police officials were with him.

C. L. Paine, manager of the store, who lives at No. 146 Massachusetts avenue, could not give any reason for the explosion, he said.

TEXT OF BOY'S LETTERS TO GORDON GIRL

Letters written to Dorothy Gordon by Willard Newell, a former Tech student, whom Dorothy Gordon said she wanted to marry, were introduced by counsel for her uncle who is seeking to remove William F. Jardine as her guardian.

"Key West, Florida.
"November 7, 1920.

"Dear Dot:

"I surely had quant to write before, but have been working real hard this year since coming back, so have been putting off most everything, but will try to do better in the future.

"I suppose you are having a wonderful time at school now. Have you seen any good football games? All I want is to see Yale beat Harvard, something like the Republicans beat the Democrats. You see, I have been working hard in the hope of getting away from here sometime in the Spring.

HINTS AT COMING OF AGE.

"Just when does your birthday come, Dot? I bet you know how many days it is now. I don't blame you a bit, though.

"We had some dance at the Navy Yard Saturday, and I was still sober at the end. Think of that!

"I surely enjoyed looking over your book, and will send it back in a day or two. Do you hear from Phil? I don't hear very often. Guess he's having a good time, all right. I still go swimming now, and though it is cool—too cool for Key waters—we Northerners like it. I hope to get over to Tampa again during the Winter. That is quite a place during the Winter season.

"Well, Dot, tell me about school and what you are doing.

"Sincerely,
"PETE."

LONGS FOR NEWS OF HER.

"Key West, Florida.

"Dear Dot:

"I think this will reach you before you have vacation, so am writing to Norton. I can imagine that those are busy days for you, taking everything together—school, business and home life. I only have to worry about one—business—as I have no home life, and school is a thing of the past.

"Have you taken in any shows or had any excitement lately? I suppose you get a trip to Boston occasionally. I would like to take a little trip myself, but guess I'll have to wait a while. I imagine I will come up this time in June, if nothing happens. Phil graduates the first part of the month, and a friend of mine wants me to come to his wedding, also in June, so I am thinking about it. That is not many months off now, is it? I would really prefer to come about the same time as last year, but do not expect to be here many months longer.

"My shoulders are kind of lame today, because I am not accustomed to such strenuous exercise. But last evening, after everyone came in for the night, we got some gloves and had some boxing. Then this afternoon I went for a long swim, but guess it won't hurt me any. I don't weigh much now, as last evening I tipped the scales at 145, clothes and all.

"What do you intend to do this Summer, Dot—camp, travel or Newport? Of course I shall have to see Beechwood as usual this year. We are having cold weather here, but I expect any day now for it to come out warm, and when it does, that means Summer until about next November. I expect I will look brown to you Northerners when you see me.

"When you write again, Dot, let me know whether you will be at Cambridge during vacation, or if you have moved. Don't forget to write soon and tell me all about yourself.

"Sincerely,
"WILLARD, OR 'PETE.'"

REFERS TO JARDINE.

"Key West, Fla.,
January 21, 1921.

"Dear Dorothy:

"Gee, how time does fly! I have just lost track of your birthday, but I do know if it has not come already, it won't be long now, so will offer you my congratulations and wish you many more happy birthdays.

"Suppose you are all having real cold weather up North now. It has been trying real hard to stay cold here during the last week, but I have not worn an overcoat for nearly a month, I guess. Did you know that Phil was playing goal on a hockey team at college? They beat Amherst College the other day, but lost to Dartmouth Saturday, 3 to 2. I have hopes of seeing some ice next Winter, and some hockey games; also football; but it doesn't do me any good to look ahead that far, either.

"So you decided to go back to school after all. You didn't say why, but I really think it is the best thing you could do right now. If I were you I would change that five-year affair you were talking about to two. You might change your mind in a couple of years, you know.

"One of the fellows here in the house writes quite often to one of the teachers at Mt. Ida School; in fact, I think he may be engaged, so I tell him all about that place, Attorney Nason, the witness said.

Loved Heiress

WILLARD B. NEWELL.

TO ASK JURY TO INDICT WIDOW OF HALL

New Brunswick, N. J., Nov. 11.—The Halle-Mills murder case will be submitted to the Grand Jury of Somerset county with a request by Special Deputy Attorney General Wilbur A. Mott for first degree murder indictments against Mrs. Frances Noel Stevens Hall, widow of the murdered clergyman, and two men.

One of the men is alleged to be the actual slayer of Mr. Hall and Mrs. Elsner Mills. The other is declared to be the plotting liage who saw to it that Mrs. Hall was made fully aware of her husband's infidelity.

The time for presentation of the case to the Grand Jury depends upon the wishes of Supreme Court Justice Parker, now in New Orleans on the way to Cuba. It is not unlikely word from him will be received in time to permit the jury to assemble on Wednesday next. At all events, Justice Parker's absence will not delay submission of the case beyond November 23, as he will be back in New Jersey November 19.

Positive assertion is made by a high official in the case that a demand will be made upan Mrs Hall for a specimen of her finger prints.

Edward Schwartz, finger print expert of the Newark police department, has submitted enlarged photographs of finger prints on the cuffs of the white shirt worn by the rector on the night of Septembes 14, and also on the love letters found strewn about the bodies. Said the official:

"We can identify every finger print we have. We believe a woman's prints appear upon the letters and the cuffs. We have asked for Mrs. Hall's finger prints."

Coincident with this development Prosecutor Mott gave assurance that the case has not reached an insurmountable barrier

Keenly aware, apparently, of criticism aroused by his failure to order prosecution in a mystery that has enthralled the country for eight weeks, Mott said:

"I have all the evidence I require for presentation to a grand jury. Only a matter of procedure is delaying me."

"Yes mean that you intend to act decisively?"

"Of course I do. That is why I am in the case."

as I used to know a certain young lady who went there once.

"Are you still planning to go to Europe this summer? If you want to know anything about Paris, I think I can tell you anything you want to know.

"It seems about a year since I was home last, but is really only a little over four months.

"Had to go to a funeral last Sunday for a soldier whose body they were bringing from France. It made me think that some of us were pretty lucky after all.

"Well, Dot, take good care of yourself, and don't study too hard so you will get too thin.

"Sincerely,
"WILLARD."

The "five-year affair" referred to in black face type is the five-year contract Jardine said Dorothy wanted to make with him to act as her guardian. In addition to this letter there is another paper bearing on the issue in the possession of the witness said.

VARIOUS parts of your brain respond to the news of this day. For instance, "Machine guns rattle in streets of Dublin."

That shows how hard it is to stop fighting when you start.

"Germans refuse to promise anything to the Allies.

"French 7½ bonds drop to 97%, a new low mark."

Somebody expects war and trouble for France, evidently. The French Premier says France's credit is stable and nobody has a right to question it. It isn't stability, but nervousness that counts when war is talked about.

Clemenceau is on his way here to lecture. See him if you can, welcome him warmly. He is a magnificent old fighting Frenchman, as good a patriot, as good a fighter and as good a man as you will live to see. He will talk English, and very plain English.

The Democrats are scrambling for jobs that the votes of Tuesday bring within their reach.

Radicalism that won its election fight out West says it wants cheaper money. Mark Sullivan says Henry Ford will lead a "cheap money" campaign in 1924. In the language of the Street, Lenin beat him to it. There is such a thing as having money TOO CHEAP.

Ask Germany.

Henry Ford is going to start industrial plants in China and teach the young Chinese to be a mechanic, at $6 a day instead of carrying a load on his back for 4 cents. That would startle Confucius. Henry Ford is a busy man. He won in Michigan. Look out for him in 1924. He is coming.

That big vote on Tuesday was a strangely mixed up protest. The "wets" figured in it, and will have about 200 public wets, to say nothing of the "privately wet" gentlemen in the next Congress.

It was a vote largely radical. But do not overlook the fact that it was also a vote of protest from those tired of excessive taxation, based on the extravagance that became so popular in the war.

The Republican party was warned a year ago, on November 18, 1921. Talking to his brothers of the steel industry, Judge Gary, head of United States Steel Corporation, the world's biggest business unit, said:

"Any politician or political party standing for present tax rates, or opposing substantial reductions down to the lowest practical level, will not continue in authority, but will go down to defeat at the first election. The people will not long endure the existing situation. In fact, they cannot."

In war, when everybody is excited and endures every kind of nonsense, politicians discover that there is lots of money

WARNING GIVEN TO OTHERS IN BRITAIN

Conspiracy Revealed by Attempt to Assassinate Sir William Horwood

London, Nov. 11 (By the Associated Press).—All night long master detectives from Scotland Yard scoured London for the perpetrators of the outrage upon their chief, Sir William Horwood, who was seriously ill today from malicious administration of poison.

So far no arrests have been reported. Sir William is not yet out of danger, but hopes for his recovery are entertained because of his great vitality.

POISON CHOCOLATES.

Scotland Yard officials announced definitely this morning that the attempt to assassinate Horwood was by means of poisoned chocolates sent through the mail.

These officials said they believed this had been but one step in a conspiracy to kill many people of prominence.

Accordingly, the police have issued a warning to all persons of note not to eat anything sent to them by post.

Sir William had a fairly good night, but it was officially stated that he is still seriously ill, and his Scotland Yard subordinates continue to maintain the greatest secrecy regarding the affair.

It appears that the chief had luncheon at a club yesterday and in the afternoon was attacked with a severe vomiting spell which brought on a heart attack. This caused a complete collapse while he was dressing to attend the Guild Hall banquet.

Only drastic remedies, including the administration of oxygen, enabled him to survive.

SECOND ATTEMPT.

According to a statement attributed by the Daily Mail to a high official at Scotland Yard, Sir William Horwood was poisoned by chocolates sent by post.

The official is quoted as saying it was the second attempt to poison the chief by mailed chocolates, the first box being delivered at Scotland Yard a fortnight ago. It was addressed to Sir William and opened by an assistant commissioner, who, suspicious because of the packet's anonymity and the stale appearance of the chocolates it contained, handed it over to the detective department to trace its origin. Inquiries apparently were without result and Sir William seemingly was not informed.

On Thursday, the Daily Mail quotes the official as saying, another anonymous box of chocolates arrived. The chief's secretary opened it and handed it to Sir William, who took it to his room and ate one or two of the chocolates while dressing for the club luncheon.

WOMAN LAWYER SEEKS DIVORCE FOR WIFE

Brockton, Nov. 11.—The first woman attorney to represent a client in a divorce suit in Plymouth County appeared before Judge Joseph Walsh in the Superior Court when Miss Bella Cohen appeared for Mrs. Emelia Marzelli of No. 58 Summer street.

Mrs. Marzelli sued for divorce on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment. She said that she was married in Italy seventeen years ago and after she came to live at Brockton her husband beat her. She showed several scars on her hands, face and shoulders where, she said, her husband stabbed her with a knife.

School Children Win Dental Flag

PUPILS OF PRESCOTT SCHOOL

Thirty first-grade students at Prescott School, Elm street, Charlestown, are the proud possessors of banners awarded them by the Forsyth Hospital because they were the first among the first grade students throughout Boston's School system to complete their dental work. Dr. Gross (left in back row) made the presentation. Dr. Jeremiah Burke, superintendent of schools, and Joseph A. O'Neil (fourth from left in back row), master of the Prescott School, were at the presentation ceremonies. Much credit for the work performed on the children's teeth is given Miss McCaffery, supervising nurse of the Boston schools, and Mrs. Nolan, nurse for the Prescott school district.

BRITAIN TO RUSH TROOPS

Harington Calls for Reinforcements to Be Sent at Once to Turkey

Paris, Nov. 11.—(By International News Service)—A report from Constantinople says the Angora Assembly has voted not to compromise with the Allies.

Rome, Nov. 11.—The Italian cruiser Premuda today was ordered immediately to Turkish waters with machine guns and 250 machine gunners.

London, Nov. 11 (By International News Service). — A new Near East crisis was indicated today when General Sir Charles Harington, British commander in Turkey, asked the government for reinforcements of troops.

Premier Law held a conference with Lord Derby, Secretary of State for War, and Admiral Earl Beatty, First Sea Lord of the Admiralty and Commander of the Fleet.

It is probable British troops will be sent from Mesopotamia and Egypt to save time and expense. The British are reported sending air planes from Mesopotamia, where they maintain the biggest air training station in the world.

There is great activity at Malta, the British naval base in the Mediterranean.

Situation Perilous as War, Says London Times

London, Nov. 11 (By the Associated Press).—The situation at Constantinople, where the Turkish Nationalists want the allies to get out and the allies are determined to sit tight, is still very critical, all the morning papers agree.

"The British government knows that the Near Eastern position today is no perilous as war," the Times declares. "French failure to stand by England in word and deed at Constantinople might be the signal for a disaster of immeasurable dimensions. There may yet be time to avert it, but the sands are running out."

Allies Bar Russia From Peace Parley

London, Nov. 11 (By International News Service).—A joint note was despatched to Russia today by the Allies stating the Near East peace settlement does not concern Russia and that Russia was not invited to participate fully in the parley for that reason. The Allies stated that Russia would not be allowed to have any part in the Turco-Greek discussion until it comes time to settle the future status of the Dardanelles, Sea of Marmora and Bosporous.

Turks Massacre Greek Gendarmes

Athens, Nov. 11 (By International News Service).—A detachment of Greek gendarmes was reported today to have been massacred by Turks at Kirk Kilossch in Thrace. Two French military policemen were wounded while suppressing an out break at Beirut.

5 SAVED AT FIRE IN LEOMINSTER HOTEL

Leominster, Nov. 11.—The Monument Square Hotel was swept by fire last night. Five persons, partially overcome by smoke, were carried down by firemen. Thirty other lodgers escaped unaided. Stores on the first floor were damaged by water. The building is owned by Scanlon & Co. of this city, and the proprietor of the hotel is Eugene Tansey. The loss is $40,000.

Baylor Trained All Night for B. C. Game

Baylor's mysterious football team was located today, resting quietly at the Hotel Essex, preparing to invade Braves Field. For two days, visitors from Texas, Boston College and Braves Field officials have been trying to get some trace of the bareheaded grid heroes. But until late this a. m., their whereabouts was as mysterious as some of those oil wells you buy stock in.

The athletes arrived today from New York, after a week or so of strange stops for practice. They must have Charlie Ross himself for a traveling manager.

MANY A MAN GETS CHANCE BECAUSE OF HIS LOYALTY

Integrity, Industry and Loyalty Open Gate to Success. Pay No Attention to Cynics Who Say Clever Rogues Have Equal Chance. Forget Loose Talk About Genius.

SAMUEL UNTERMYER

Distinguished Lawyer and Public-Spirited Citizen.

I HAVE ALWAYS regarded it as presumptuous and as a sure sign of egotism to respond to requests such as you put to me, but as you believe that among your 3,000,000 readers some one may be found to whom it may be useful and as I have confidence in your judgment, I herewith surrender my own preference.

You want my view of the best guide of how to get on in life. There should be no difficulty in answering that question if one may indulge in platitudes and glittering generalities. Integrity, industry and loyalty are the combination that will open the gate to material success. Pay no attention to the cynics and failures who tell you to the contrary or who insist that clever rogues with brains and opportunities in business and finance have an equal chance. There are freaks and flukes in Nature. Why should there not be an occasional few in human affairs? The few exceptions serve only to prove the rule.

Bankers and business men of the widest experience will tell you that they would rather trust their money or sell their merchandise on credit to a man of high character with limited means than to one of unlimited wealth of doubtful character. When a business or professional man has impaired his reputation for integrity, his usefulness is forever gone, no matter how great his wealth or how clever he may be.

But character without untiring industry, whilst it commands respect, renders success impossible. Pay no attention to all this loose talk about "genius." There is only about one genius born in a century and nobody would ever know or hear of him if he had lacked industry, for it is only by that means that genius can be developed and given its fullest expression. The history of all the arts and sciences proves this. The most patient and plodding workers in the world have been the inspired poets, painters, sculptors, singers, musicians, actors and writers, most of whom have persevered for the better part of their lives and under endless suffering and discouragement. Some have been so fortunate as to secure recognition while they yet lived, but most of the rewards have come after death. But they did not falter.

There is no room for mediocrity in high places, although there is, unfortunately, much of it to be found there. Without endless industry and concentration there can be no proper preparation for the opportunity when it comes and accordingly there can be no permanent success. We are living in a highly specialized state of economic and industrial life; a fierce competitive struggle. There are too many people who scatter their talents and energies, who can do a particular thing fairly well, and there are too few who have the singleness of purpose to excel in the race with their fellow-men.

I would rather be born with a frail body and a mediocre mind but with dogged, plodding industry and perseverance than be born a genius without them. I would get further in the race for happiness and success, provided I could be blessed with decent human instincts. There is no genius like the genius of industry. Without it all else is worthless in the mad race for what the world calls success.

But even with industry you can achieve no permanent power or influence without loyalty—loyalty to friends and principles. The "yellow" streak is bound to show itself sooner or later, and when it does the game is up so far as concerns the confidence that we must enjoy if we are to succeed. Many a man gets his chance solely because of his loyalty. Whether he is able to take it depends on how well he is equipped by character and habits of industry.

It is not true that in this country that men are denied opportunity, no matter how lowly may be their position. Most of the leaders in our professional, industrial and financial life today came from the very bottom. It is a handicap rather than a help to have too much money or opportunity. The trouble in most cases is that we are unprepared for the opportunity when it comes. Some have waited long and surrendered the struggle; others have mistaken ambition for accomplishment. Ambition, unless buttressed by ability to do the thing better than others, is an impediment rather than an aid. The thirst for knowledge is not slaked by thinking and talking about it instead of drinking deeply.

And so I insist that [illegible]ory is the keynote to success for the man of character. [illegible]rs need not apply unless they are anxious to wreck their [illegible]deserve less on the gambler's chance of getting something [illegible] which they are not entitled and cannot retain if they get it.

5 CHILDREN IN CHARLESTOWN SAVED AT FIRE

Five children were carried down a fire escape to safety by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Di Grezio, during a fire in the three-story block, No. 7 Fuss street, Charlestown, today.

The Di Grezios were asleep on the top floor when smoke awakened the father.

Di Grezio awakened his wife Theresa, and together they gathered all their children in their arms and fled to safety. The children are, Lee, nine; Tony, eight; Annie, five; Pasqualena, three, and George, three months.

Mrs. Luca Pavallo, who occupies the second floor, also escaped by way of the fire-escape.

The fire started in the store room on the first floor. The building is owned by Elbyn A. Crettly of No. 102 Dunston road, Jamaica Plain. Damage was estimated at $500.

PITTMAN PROUD OF CARRYING OWN TOWN

San Francisco, Nov. 11.—Senator Key Pittman of Nevada, re-elected by a large majority, announced here today he would have the Nevada returns framed when he arrived in Washington. At the top of the frame Senator Pitman plans to place the inscription:

"He carried his home town."

"Senator Johnson of California," Senator Pittman said, "also must be given credit for carrying his home town and in politics any man who carries his own city is an exception."

CHARGE FORGERY IN RECOUNT PETITION

Lunenberg, Nov. 11.—A forged petition for a recount of the Lodge-Gaston vote is under investigation here, with the police searching for a man who gave his name as John J. Sullivan. The petition, presented to City Clerk Whitcomb, bears the forged names of seven Lunenberg citizens. All those whose names appeared on the petition disclaimed any knowledge of it.

Scallop Dredger Digs Up $10,000 in Gems and Notes

Edgartown, Nov. 11.—Everett Fisher, a familiar figure among the hardy seamen here, cast his nets for scallops in Edgartown harbor, and drew up from the sea a silken handbag containing jewels and money valued at $10,000.

While his fellow fishermen congratulated him on the prize catch of the season, Fisher made arrangements for the property to be held for its owner in the local National Bank.

On examination the water-soaked bag proved to be the lost property of Mrs. Frank de Bernard of St. Louis, who has an extensive Summer estate here.

CHINESE BANDIT GANG HOLDS 2 AMERICANS

Shanghai, Nov. 11 (By the Associated Press).—Two American missionaries, unnamed, are among foreign captives held by bandits in Honan province, according to word received here from Madame Soderstrom of the Lutheran mission, who has been released by the bandits and has arrived at Ying-Chowfu.

She also reported that she saw H. E. Ledgard of the China Inland Mission staff among the hostages.

CALIFORNIA "DRY" BY 29,621 VOTES

San Francisco, Nov. 11.—The Eighteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution, with the Volstead Act, has been voted a part of the California laws by a majority of 29,621 votes, returns complete except for scattered precincts indicated today. The vote was, For 467,952 against, 378,311. First returns indicated an overwhelming defeat of the measure. The dry victory came after prohibition proponents had been voted down for ten years.

GUNMEN BEAT AND ROB MILK DRIVER

Springfield, Nov. 11.—Three armed bandits held up Raymond J. McManley at North End bridge over the Connecticut River today and this is what they did to him:

Half stunned him with revolver butt; robbed him of $2; dicked him twice in the river; strangled him with his own belt; gagged him; tied his hand behind his back; walked him to a freight yard; left him unconscious when a yard man, Irving Hills, approached and gave first aid.

ON HIS WAY TO WORK.

McManley is nineteen, lives at No. 27 Alfred street, city, and is a wagon driver for Thomas Kane, West Springfield milkman. He walks to work and was on his way today via the bridge which connects Springfield and West Springfield when attacked.

McManley was sent to Mercy Hospital whose doctors say he will recover.

General alarm was sent out for the bandits. Surrounding communities were notified. McManley was able to give only slight descriptions.

GIVE GEN. EDWARDS NEW RIDING CROP

Major-General Clarence R. Edwards, retiring commander First Corps Area, has a new riding crop to use the next time he takes out his favorite saddle horse. The crop was presented him at the annual dance of the Quincy YD Club in Alpha Hall, Quincy, where General and Mrs. Edwards were guests. The presentation was made by Colonel Warren E. Sweetser, General Edwards said, in responding, that he had recommended to the War Department that a Distinguished Service Cross be awarded to Colonel Sweetser for his services as liaison officer in the Yankee Division. General Edwards called on all YD members to help him when he takes up reorganization of the Massachusetts branch of the National Guard at Governor Cox's request, following his retirement December 1.

GASTON GAINS 2 IN RECOUNT OF 2 TOWNS

The plurality of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge over Colonel William A. Gaston has been reduced by two votes in a recount of the ballots cast in Wilmington.

In Bedford, where a recount was also held, the figures reported on Tuesday were found to be correct. The original tabulation in Wilmington gave Lodge 350 and Gaston 176, while on retabulation Lodge's vote was reduced to 349 and that of Gaston was increased to 177.

Under the eyes of local police, Department of Justice agents and private detectives, the recount at Framington starts at 1 p. m. today.

By early afternoon the recount in Cambridge, Arlington, Newton, Brookline, Adams, Beverly and other towns will be under way. In Boston the seals on the ballot boxes will not be broken until Monday when the recount here will begin under the direction of Chairman Burlen of the Election Commissioners.

The recount in Lynn will begin at 2 p. m. tomorrow. Lowell will start Monday. Westfield will get under way Tuesday.

CURLEY DECRIES "FRAUD."

The Boston recount will be held in Faneuil Hall. The entire recount should be finished by Wednesday or Thursday, according to those in charge.

Meanwhile the air is charged with suspicion and talk of fraud. Charges of fraudulent counting of the ballots in several districts are being investigated by Department of Justice operatives under orders from United States Attorney Robert O. Harris.

Mayor James M. Curley has characterized the "fraud" talk as nonsense and he states that he has heard of no discrepancies in the handling of the ballots.

The Gaston forces are working vigorously to complete their arrangements for a State-wide recount while the Colonel himself is bound for Europe seeking a rest.

G. O. P. TOWNS BALK.

It is estimated that they have secured recount petitions for at least 90 per cent. of the election districts of the State. There are 597 wards and towns in the State.

According to Chairman Foss of the Republican State Committee a majority of the ballots cast in Tuesday's election will be recounted. Yet in many small towns the chairmen have notified the State Committee that they are unable to get the required number of signatures, or that they are unwilling to do so and thus put "needless expense on the town."

FIND SKELETON OF HUDSON SUICIDE

Hudson, Nov. 11.—A skeleton of a man was found in the woods near the Hudson-Bolton boundary line today. The body was later identified as Charles R. Rieta, thirty-seven years old, who disappeared from his home on Lincoln street, May 15.

A revolver was found near his right hand, and a bullet hole in the skull. Medical Examiner H. M. Hunter of Hudson pronounced death due to suicide.

WARD TO INSIST ON TRIAL OR FREEDOM

New York, Nov. 11.—Isaac N. Mills of Mount Vernon, as chief counsel for Walter S. Ward of New Rochelle, indicted for the murder of Clarence Peters, will appear before Justice Morschauer in Supreme Court at White Plains on Monday to insist that Ward go to trial immediately or else that the indictment be dismissed. Ward is out on $50,000 bail.

Day's News in Jazz Time

By MORTON BIRGE

Consider Mister Fortescue and what he didn't say;
'Twas quite a speech he didn't make to West Point boys today.
He's such a whiz on history. He seems to have renown,
At least where he hangs up his hat in dear old Lunnon Town.

He comes across to lecture and by courtesy he gets
A bid to the Academy to talk to the Cadets,
But now the bid has been recalled with nifty l'tle note
Because of th'ngs that Fortescue unfortunately wrote.

In which Americans receive the bally British hook;
He said in all our doings we are foul and full of tricks;
He's therefore welcome at West Point. He certainly is—NIX!

"DRY" ACT DRIVES SHIP RESOLUTE TO FOREIGN REGISTRY

The steamship Resolute and her sister ship, Reliance, among the finest of the American Merchant Marine, are the first to register under the flag of the Republic of Panama.

The Volstead act hit a snag in the enforcement of dry rules on American ships.

The snag is that American vessels, in order to get around the "three-mile limit" ruling and other rulings of the prohibition act, are changing their registry.

The first to take this step are the steamships "Resolute" and "Reliance" of the American lines. These two ships, among the finest in the American merchant marine, are having their registry changed from the United States to the Republic of Panama.

The decision to take this step was reached after many cancellations were made by passengers who were going on one of the steamers for a world tour. The result will be that the United States will lose two splendid vessels because they cannot under American registry sell liquor to the American passengers who differ with the proponents of prohibition.

FINAL FIGURES ON BOSTON ELECTION

For Governor: Cox (R) 86,194; Fitzgerald (D) 107,812.

For U. S. Senator: Lodge (R) 88,914, Gaston (D) 103,011.

MISS M'SWINEY SEVEN DAYS ON HUNGER STRIKE

Dublin, Nov. 11 (By International News Service).—Mary MacSwiney, sister of the late Lord Mayor of Cork, who was arrested four days ago today charged with plotting disorders, was still on hunger strike today.

She has not eaten since her arrest. She said she would starve herself to death as her brother did in Brixton jail in London unless she is released.

WOODHOUSE DECEIVED WIFE, SAYS WITNESS stand that he was a party in a plot with Douglas Woodhouse to deceive his wife, Dorrit Stevens Woodhouse, as to his whereabouts during the past year by signing Douglas' name to a telegram sent to her in Boston to give her the impression he was in Burlington when he was really at Cape Cod.

This admission was followed by testimony from Hill that Mary Kennedy Woodhouse and her husband Lorenzo, against whom their daughter-in-law Dorrit is bringing the sensational $1,000,000 alienation of affections suit, connived to conceal from her their son's residence by forwarding back to her by "circuit bus routes" bills she sent to her husband which he refused to pay.

Hill's testimony, though given in evasive and reluctant answers which caused the court to rule him an "adverse witness," revealed several startling facts having important bearing on the Woodhouse trial.

He finally admitted that within the past thirty days he purchased $55,000 worth of bonds and turned them over to Lorenzo Woodhouse.

AMOUNT OF FORTUNE.

Fifty-five thousand dollars happens to be also the amount of Douglas' fortune which Dorrit claims has been "juggled" about by the senior Woodhouse family so the Douglas could not get it until after his separation from her.

Five times this important sum has been mentioned in the testimony of as many witnesses and five conflicting statements have been made concerning it.

1—Lorenzo Woodhouse on the stand testified that he returned his amount held in trust by him during his son's service in the army, to Douglas after reading his deposition.

3—Mrs. Mary E. Woodhouse testified that she had the $55,000 in her own safe deposit box.

4—Arthur Hill, after much questioning on the part of Attorney Austin, admitted that he had "on or about the 18th of September, in 1920, delivered to Lorenzo Woodhouse at the Merchants' National Bank stocks and bonds belonging to Douglas valued at $55,000."

5—Hill later in his testimony said he had, after October 12, invested $55,000 in bonds and turned them over to Lorenzo.

Hill denied Lorenzo told him "it is cheaper to pay alimony than to support a daughter-in-law," an expression Dorrit claims Hill repeated to her in a conference in the bank where she came to see about the locking up of the Woodhouse garage, barring her from the use of her husband's car. He further denied that he heard Lorenzo say concerning his son's marriage, "they will regret it all around."

SENT TELEGRAM.

In regard to the plot to put Dorrit off the track of Douglas, Attorney Austin questioned Hill to some length.

Q.—Did you send a telegram from Burlington to Mrs. Dorrit Woodhouse at the Hotel Vendome in Boston, August 28, 1920, signed "C. C. D."

A.—I may have.

Q.—Was Douglas in Burlington?

A.—If I sent the telegram he was not there.

Q.—Don't you know, Mr. Hill, where Douglas was at that time?

A.—I might have some recollection.

Q.—Doesn't this telegram refresh your memory, recalling whether you did aid him in concealing from his wife that he was at his parents' cottage in Chatham?

A.—I did aid him at his request.

Examined by Attorney Austin regarding the auto incident, Hill admitted finaly that he had locked up the Woodhouse garage at the direction of Douglas Woodhouse himself, not Lorenzo Woodhouse, to prevent the use of his car by his young wife.

Douglas' deposition had emphatically denied this, and declared that the only knowledge he had of the incident came in a letter from her, complaining that some one had locked the garage. Attorney Austin questioned Hill.

Q.—What did you do with regard to locking up the garage barring the plaintiff from the use of the car?

A.—I saw that it was locked.

Q.—Did that bar the plaintiff from the use of that car?

A.—It did.

A.—Douglas Woodhouse.

Q.—Not at the direction of Lo-

LEDGERS IN COURT.

In an attempt to get at various records and estimate the wealth of Douglas a huge stack of seventy-two great ledgers from the Merchants National Bank were brought into the court room by five husky men and deposited in solemn and impressive procession outside the bar facing the counsel.

The spectators found it hard to keep from laughing as the truckmen struggled with the heavy two by three foot ledgers and deposited them at the feet of Attorney Austin while he was engaged in cross-examining Hill.

The ledgers were ordered brought to court only after a long and bitter argument between the four opposing lawyers and Attorney Austin who asked for certain records pertaining to evidence he wanted to bring out concerning the financial standing of Douglas, and certain directors' meetings.

It was impossible to go through the pile so court agreed to adjourn while the records were investigated by counsel in the bank itself.

It is expected that some light will also be thrown on the actual wealth of Lorenzo. He is reported to be the richest man in Vermont. The Marshall Fields fortune is for the second time drawn into a million-dollar suit, for indirectly the Marshall Field fortune is connected with that of Woodhouse.

Lorenzo, father of Douglas, inherited from his father, Charles Woodhouse, president of the Merchants National Bank, the fortune not only by Charles D. Woodhouse, his grandfather, but also by Lorenzo Woodhouse, uncle of Douglas, who accumulated his fortune in partnership with Marshall Field.

It's a habit hard to lose. That figured in that last Tuesday's vote.

This country can't be safe in war, or fully prosperous in peace, without ships. It can't have ships without ship subsidy, therefore it needs a subsidy

President Harding knows it, and in the face of Tuesday's vote has the courage to call Congress to pass the subsidy. That shows courage, and that's what the Republican party needs to get back on its feet before 1924.

Newspapers predicting that the President would not dare call Congress together for six months or more, discover that they don't know the President well.

Prohibition gentlemen are able to fight without whiskey to fight on, and seem to enjoy it. "Pussyfoot" Johnson had one of his eyes put out in England. That didn't discourage him.

William H. Anderson, boss of prohibition in the State of New York, where the wets won, flatly accuses Al Smith, elected wet Governor, of violating his oath of office. For making that criminal charge, the Governor, with the very great powers that law gives him, could put Mr. Anderson in jail, if he chose, but that doesn't seem to worry Mr. Anderson.

Prohibitionists like fighting. That is why the Eighteenth Amendment is in the Constitution. Congressmen don't like fighting and are easily frightened.

Some grieve because in the forty-eight States there are forty-eight different kinds of marriage laws and divorce laws. That's cause for congratulations, not complaint.

Marriage, only a few thousand years old, is an experiment to him who looks at it coldly. It is a divine sacrament of heavenly origin and everlastingly binding to others. It is an easy come, easy go, "swing your partners" proposition to many.

It is fundamentally a training school for men, in which they are slowly learning decency, thanks to the educating influence of children.

Just how marriage will develop nobody knows. Therefore, instead of complaining about forty-eight kinds of laws in forty-eight States the nation should congratulate itself. Each State can make its own experiments and report results without upsetting the others. Our safety is in heterogeneity of laws and customs.

Editor Boston Advertiser:

I am very glad to know that we are now to have the opinions of the commanders of army and groups of armies that were lately opposed to the American soldiers in the World War.

I shall read with interest each of the contributions from the pens of those who lately opposed us.

Sincerely,
(Signed) C. R. EDWARDS,
Major General.

"It Was the American Soldier That Whipped Us"

Read what Gen. Von Gallwitz, General of artillery, who was in personal command of German forces opposing the main body of the American army and Yankee Division, says:

"Some of the Americans, when surprised in their trenches, refused to surrender, preferring to be blown up into the air."

"One man, taken on April 17th, 26th (Yankee) Division, Siray, fought heroically and single-handed against stronger forces and refused to talk after being disarmed."

"An attack against the American (Yankee) Division at the Forest Riemieres undertaken June 19th, led to little success on account of their fierce resistance."

BANQUET TONIGHT.

Special services are to be staged between the halves at the Harvard-Princeton game and the Boston College-Baylor game. A number of banquets are scheduled by military organizations for tonight. Arlington and Lexington Posts of the American Legion will hold Victory balls.

Harding Lays Wreath on Grave of Unknown

Washington, Nov. 11.—On the plain granite rock in Arlington Cemetery that a year ago became a new shrine to American ideals, there blossomed today a wealth of flowers laid reverently there to commemorate the first anniversary of the homecoming of America's unknown soldier from France. Again the nation sealed the covenant of American faith it then pledged beside the grave now covered by the massive boulder.

Again President Harding made the pilgrimage from Washington in behalf of all his countrymen. But this time the message he bore was no spoken word, but a simple wreath to rest on the great stone. The guns that roared the national salute in honor to the dead alone broke stillness to voice a nation's pride.

For the Army Secretary Weeks accompanied the President and for the Navy Secretary Denby. That completed the group which carried to the tomb the token of remembrance that was placed for all the nation. The only touch of ceremony was that lent by the clattering troop of cavalry which supported the Presidential party.

An Armistice Day pilgrimage to the home here of Woodrow Wilson had been arranged for today under the direction of a committee of women. Henry Morganthau, former ambassador to Turkey, was to deliver a brief address.

An formally expressing the comradeship of the American government in tribute to the Belgian unknown soldier, President Harding has approved the following citation which will be bestowed with the Congressional medal of honor by Major-General Henry T. Allen, commanding American forces in Germany and specially ordered to Brussels for the purpose.

"By virtue of the authority vested by law in the President of the United States, the Congressional medal of honor, emblem of the highest military ideals and virtues, is bestowed in the name of the Congress of the United States upon the unknown, unidentified Belgian soldier in a desire to add all that is possible to the unperishable glory won by the soldiers of Belgium who fought as comrades of the American soldiers during the World War and to commemorate with them the deeds of the nations associated with the United States of America, by paying this tribute to their unknown dead."

France Pays Tribute to Unknown Hero

Paris, Nov. 11 (By the Associated Press).—"Let each of us remember today the emotion which shook him when he learned the news," reads the Armistice Day message of Marshal Joffre.

France today established the precedent of making the legal armistice holiday distinctly a veterans' day. The associations composed of former fighting men in the French army organized the celebration program and carried it out, making it more of a solemnity than a festival.

A body of former soldiers carried several hundred battle flags to the tomb of the unknown soldier, where the banners were lowered in salute to the hero dead.

At eleven o'clock the population ceased its activities and stood for a minute of silent meditation.

1,000 Gift Dolls

ALICE M. McMANUS

More than a thousand dolls have been purchased through subscriptions sent to the State Ward Society for girls who are under the care of the State. Miss Alice M. McManus, one of those at the organization's headquarters, is shown with one of the dolls all dressed for some youngster. The boys are not to be forgotten this Christmas either. A fund has been started by James E. Fee, in charge of the State wards.

BUSINESS BOOM 2 YEARS AWAY, SAYS BABSON

New York, Nov. 11.—There is no real boom period under way today, and real prosperity is not in sight for two or three years. Roger Babson, business analyst, told a large Cooper Union audience in discussing the business outlook for 1923.

"Big business corporations will not again roll up large surpluses on their books until at least another two years," he said. 'The are now entering the last or fourth phase of the business cycle—the period of improvement—and it will be two or three years before we get back to normal conditions."

TO BUY MORE AUTOS.

While predicting a stiffening of prices in the primary markets in the next few months, and seeing an upward swing in the prices in the woolen and worsted markets, Mr. Babson declared people would buy less clothing and more automobiles in the next few months.

"People today," he said, "buy necessities last. They buy things today that give them caste in the community. Automobiles are one of the outstanding items in this category."

"Off-hand critics are fond of knocking the retailer as a man of limited foresight and ability," he continued. "I do not agree with this view. We have all learned many things in the recent period of depression. One is that no one of us can have lasting prosperity except as those whom we serve prosper likewise.

"BACK THE RETAILER."

"The crying need of the hour is that we get behind the retailer and help him. If his methods are wrong, it is our misfortune and it is up to the rest of us to show him a better way."

Mr. Babson then said that while support would be given the retailer the latter must realize that the idea that he must fight the chain store and co-operative buying is wrong, and that he must adopt improvements of those systems to prevent the field from being dominated by them.

"Now that we are on the very eve of general business improvement, the retailer must get in a better mental attitude to capitalize this opportunity," Mr. Babson said.

NEW VICTIM IN WOMEN POISON PLOT FOUND

Chicago, Nov. 11.—Another name was added today to the list of deaths under investigation as a result of the alleged poison plot of Mrs. Tillie Klimek and her cousin, Mrs. Nellie Sturmer Koulik, charged with murder.

John Guszkowski died several years ago under mysterious circumstances after a quarrel with Mrs. Klimek, according to the police and coroner's office, who asked relatives of Guszkowski to consent to an examination of his body.

Three of the five bodies already exhumed are those of former husbands of Mrs. Klimek. Poison was found in the first two bodies examined, according to coroner's physicians.

Police say all the dead husbands carried insurance.

Night Treatment at City Hospital Suggested

It may be possible for the citizens of Boston to have medical treatment evenings at the City Hospital out-patient department, providing the trustees of that institution approve of the recommendations of the newly-organized conservation bureau for night health clinics.

The matter is under consideration by the trustees. The bureau at its meeting held in the office of Mayor Curley voted to ask the trustees to do this. M. Douglas Flattery was chairman of the session.

GRID CAPTAIN AND 7 OTHERS HURT IN CRASH

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 11. — Roy Wright, captain of the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute football team and seven others, including three young women, were injured, none seriously, in an automobile accident here today. All were taken to a hospital.

Besides Wright the injured are: Betty Hartnett and Alice Maroney of Troy, Katherine Keller and Webster Pine of Albany; John Lawlor and William B. Jones of Troy.

ASKS TENANTS PAY TAX ABOVE FIXED SUM

The Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange suggests, in a letter to the special commission on municipal finance and taxation, that the Boston tax rates on real estate be stabilized at not over some fixed amount, such as $25 per thousand, and that any appropriation not so provided for by municipalities be "met with a tax on the occupier according to the value of the property occupied.

The Exchange adds that there are always more rent payers than real estate owners and that such a tax would make citizens watch appropriations more closely. It also would equalize the stock excuse of rent-raising landlords, says the Exchange.

Unrest in District Cause of Defeat, Says Volstead

Granite Falls, Minn., Nov. 11.—Unrest, the fact that the Democrats had no candidate running against him, and the "wet" vote defeated Congressman Andrew J. Volstead, author of the prohibition enforcement act, in his campaign for re-election, he told International News Service here.

"Two years ago the Democrats had a candidate running against me," Mr. Volstead said. "This year they did not. In addition, the wets lined up against me, of course, and those two groups, with the non-partisans, made too much for me."

"Unrest" in his district, however, was the chief cause to which Volstead attributed his defeat.

INDICTED, IS HONORED BY TEACHERS

Chicago, Nov. 11.—A fund of 60 cents donated by fifty Chicago school teachers will be presented at the next meeting of the board of education to buy a can of polish for the $1,700 silver teapot which, according to testimony before the Grand Jury, school engineers presented to Trustee Albert H. Severinghaus when the board raised the engineers' salaries.

The teachers forwarded their donations of 1 cent each to Trustee J. Lewis Coath, who announced he would present it at the next meeting.

If they had the money, the teachers said in their letter to Mr. Coath, they would like to erect a monument to Mr. Severinghaus, who is under indictment in connection with alleged fraudulent use of school funds. "It would be our crowning testimony," the letter said, "to a man who did the schools of Chicago good."

$90 Goes to Laundry in Night Gown; but $10 Returns

Springfield, Nov. 11.—When Mrs. Stephen Manson of No. 25 Sharon street gathered up her soiled clothes and sent them to the wetwash she neglected to remove $90 in bills from the pocket of her night gown.

Discovering her loss, she hastened to the laundry, but the money could not be found. However, when the clothes returned from the laundry a $10 bill was enclosed in the bundle.

Mrs. Manson has appealed to the police to help her recover the balance.

OCTOBER CONSTRUCTION 14 P.C. AHEAD OF LAST YEAR

October construction was 14 per cent. ahead of last year throughout twenty-seven Northeastern States, according to statistics compiled by the F. W. Dodge Company. The total of building contracts awarded in these States—which include about three-quarters of the total construction in the country—amounted to $253,137,000.

In New England the total amount awarded was $26,362,000, an increase of 22 per cent. over the figures of October last year.

The continuation of the seasonal decline is shown by the drop in the figures for the section reporting of 7 per cent. from the previous month, but in view of the fuel and car shortage and other restrictive factors, this decline is not considered to portend any slump in the general condition.

The month's figures for New England showed the total to be 13 per cent. less than for September.

RESIDENTIAL BUILDING LEADS

Residential construction continues to lead all other kinds of building activity, October contracts for this class having amounted to $110,776,200, or 44 per cent. of the month's total. This was an increase over September residential construction. Other important items in the October figures were: $41,477,000, or 16 per cent. for public works and utilities; $32,037,000, or 13 per cent. for business buildings; $27,840,000 or 11 per cent. for industrial buildings, and $17,437,000 or 7 per cent. for educational buildings.

In New England during October, the figures showed the following items: $14,146,000 or 54 per cent. for residential buildings; $3,473,000 or 13 per cent. for business buildings; $2,180,000 or 9 per cen.. for industrial buildings, and $2,046,000 or 8 per cent. for hospitals and institutions.

Construction started during the first ten months of this year has amounted to $2,887,466,000. This is 23 per cent. greater than the total for the entire year of 1921, and 47 per cent. greater than the total for the first ten months of 1921. Of this amount, construction in New England has amounted to $285,914,000 as compared with $205,147,000 for the entire year of 1921.

INDUSTRIAL REVIVAL

The revival of residential construction this year has overshadowed everything else in the building field. But there has also been another revival that is very significant. Industrial construction this year has averaged 27 millions per month, compared with 14 millions per month in 1921. This increase, although it has not yet assumed large proportions, seems to indicate a substantial revival in this class of building.

Contemplated new work reported in October amounted to $418,164,000, an increase of 78 per cent. over contemplated work reported in September. Of this amount, $83,816,000—nearly double the contemplated work in September—was reported from New England.

RECORDS BROKEN ON ROAD CONTRACT

The largest rebuilding job ever let by the Massachusetts Highway Commissioner on one contract—a stretch of ten and one-half miles of the Newburyport Turnpike—was completed and opened to the public on last Sunday, just one month ahead of the specified time.

The contractors, Coleman Brothers, of 245 State street, Boston, in completing this stretch of road, have broken all previous speed records for construction of permanent highways. The magnitude of the work gave opportunity for the exercise of considerable ingenuity in developing time-saving methods, and demonstrated that it is entirely practical for a contractor with the proper engineering staff and equipment to handle a stretch of road of this length.

PRINTER TAKES OVER OTHER'S PLANT

Announcement is made of the taking over of the printing plant and factory organization of the Louis E. Crosscup Company by the Atlantic Printing Company of 201 South street, Boston. Mr. Carroll, who had been in charge of the Crosscup organization, will continue with the new management in the same capacity.

The consolidation was effected by the Atlantic Printing Company in order to permit more advantageous segregation of those departments manufacturing only the highest grade of printed matter on special machines with specially trained operators, while retaining the advantages of low overhead owing to the quantity production in the other departments of the organization.

Under the new arrangement the planning and typographic arrangement of the better grades of work will be under the direct supervision of Lewis C. Gandy, formerly editor of The Printing Art, who has had long experience in the printing and advertising fields and who has won national recognition for his ability to produce simple, dignified, yet effective printing.

The additional equipment acquired with the Crosscup organization makes the Atlantic Printing Company one of the largest commercial printing plants in New England. The combined equipment includes 19 cylinder presses, 9 monotype machines, a very large and complete hand-type equipment, 14 job presses, a complete band and machine binding and an organization of thoroughly trained printing and advertising men.

The Atlantic Printing Company assumes complete responsibility for its work, as it is all manufactured under one roof in the most economical way. The growth of its plant and the constantly increasing output are evidences of its ability, under the leadership of John E. Lewis, president, to serve its customers in a satisfactory manner.

GOVERNORRS ISLAND TAKEN BACK BY U. S.

The Federal government has taken back "Governors Island" in Boston Harbor which it loaned to the city back in 1907.

"For navy purposes," is the reason for the asking or rather the revocation of the permit, according to a letter received by Mayor Curley from Secretary of War John W. Weeks.

The Secretary of War was authorized to permit the city of Boston according to joint resolution of Congress passed June 5, 1922 "to improve and beautify Governors Island or a portion thereof, in connection with mooring berths to be built adjoining, and make such excavations and fillings and erect, maintain such structures as may be considered proper."

WANT MISS BOOTH LEFT IN AMERICA

New York, Nov. 11.—Protesting against the contemplated transfer to some other field of Commander Evangeline Booth, head of the Salvation Army in the United States, many men prominent in financial and philanthropic circles have cabled General William Booth at London urging that Miss Booth be left in command in this country.

33 P. C. Increase in Building Awards During Week

Statistics of building and engineering operations in New England, compiled by the F. W. Dodge Company, show practically a 33 per cent. increase in contracts awarded during the week ending November 7, as compared with the corresponding week of last year. This is the second highest amount reported for this period in twenty-two years, having been exceeded only by the corresponding week of 1920.

The figures are:

Week ending Nov. 7, 1922	$6,004,700
Corresponding week, 1921	4,361,000
Corresponding week, 1920	8,200,000

TRAFFIC TAKES TOLL FROM TAXI

That it costs fifty per cent. more to operate in Boston than it does in New York or Chicago, is the finding of the National Taxicab Association, according to Mr. Doherty of the Armstrong Transfer Company, whose main office is located at No. 271 Albany street. The reason for this higher cost of operation is attributed to the congested traffic and narrow, crooked streets of the downtown districts.

Despite this, the Armstrong Company announces the addition of six new Vim taxicabs with special bodies by Osgood-Bradley Company, bringing its total fleet up to forty-five taxicabs, seventeen motor trucks and twelve baggage wagons.

One of the principal reasons for the success of the Armstrong Transfer Company is the care and high degree of efficiency shown by its drivers. Some of the men employed as taxi drivers have been with the company for twenty-five years.

A striking example of the capability and initiative of the Armstrong drivers was shown in the act of William Brothers, of No. 65 Gates avenue, whose heroism and quick-thinking recently saved the life of a child trapped by a maddened runaway horse.

All of the cabs of the company are protected by accident insurance, yet rarely is an accident reported. This is due to the fact that insurance companies are refusing to insure taxicabs operated by unreliable drivers.

EXPANSION FORCES BANKERS TO MOVE

Due to the expansion of its business, the Mercantile Credit Plan, Inc., commercial bankers, have moved to new and larger banking quarters at No. 161 Devonshire street. This location is right in the very centre of the financial district.

Recently Judson L. Tirrell, formerly vice-president of the Boston Morris Plan Bank, became affiliated with the Mercantile Credit Plan, Inc. Mr. Tirrell's banking experience has been along lines that render his services very valuable in a credit and loan capacity.

Strong banking connections have already been established, and this, together with the corporation's funds, enables the Mercantile Credit Plan, Inc., to make a profitable turnover. Plans are now under way to increase the board members by electing a co-operative bank president and a national bank man to its board of directors.

HOSPITAL APPEALS FOR $200,000 FUND

A public appeal for funds will be conducted by the Middlesex Hospital of Cambridge during the coming month. An attempt will be made to raise $200,000 in order to enable the officials to double the size of the hospital. The institution was established at Otis and Fourth streets ten years ago. Almost all of the surgical and medical treatment is given free to those who are too poor to pay. Mrs. Charlotte S. L. Arnolt is president of the corporation.

GOOD WILL OF U. S. SOUGHT BY MUSSOLINI

Roma, Nov. 11 (By the Associated Press).—Premier Mussolini received the American correspondents in Rome yesterday, and chatted upon such timely topics as prohibition, woman's suffrage and American immigration.

The interview was launched upon the topic of reparations. Mussolini said that in his opinion it was impossible to separate the question of reparations from that of inter-allied debts, even where the latter affected the United States.

HOPES TO PAY U. S.

He was very cordial in his references to the relations between Italy and the United States and said he hoped to add to the good will prevailing between the two countries an economic co-operation that would be mutually beneficial.

"Money debts are debts of honor and we must pay them," the Italian Premier declared. "We sincerely hope it will be possible for Italy to pay America.

"We have the working men; you have the capital," he said. "I would be happy if your country would amend the law limiting immigrants from Italy to the number of 42,000 a year, extending it to at least 100,000. This would benefit the United States, Italy, and the whole of civilization."

WOMEN WON'T WANT VOTE.

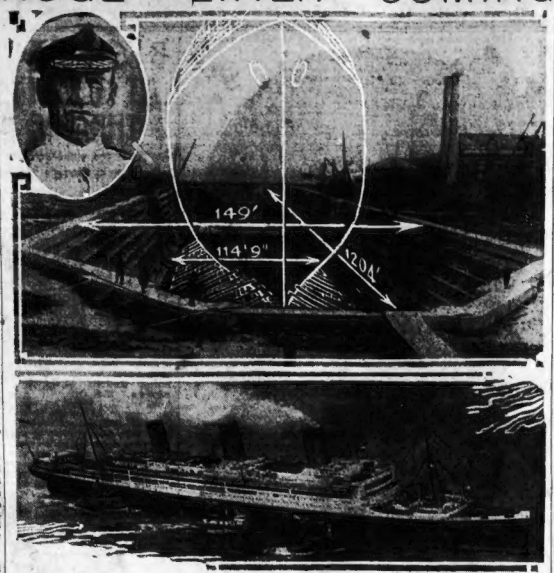
Of woman suffrage, Mussolini said he was absolutely opposed to it. Then, seeming to feel his remark had not been properly interpreted, he added that he did not think general conditions were yet ripe for such a franchise.

"When they are ripe, we will give the women the vote, and then they will have no desire to vote," he said.

The prohibition question was popped to him. He said he was not in favor of complete dryness, but thought that parity by legislation and parity by persuasion, people must be taught to drink less.

"Italians as a rule do not drink much alcohol," he remarked. "They are the only people with whom I am concerned about this subject just now. During the whole period of the Fascisti revolution there was not a single Fascisti drunk."

HUGE LINER COMING



MAJESTIC AND DIAGRAM OF STEAMER IN DRY DOCK

On November 16 the White Star liner Majestic, the largest liner afloat, will be placed in the giant dry dock at South Boston for repairs. Above is shown the Majestic as she looks entering New York Harbor and at top a view of the South Boston dry dock, with diagram showing the dimensions of the liner and how easily she will sit on her cradle in the dock. Upper left, in circle is Capt. Sir Bertram Hayes, commander of the Majestic, who will bring her to Boston.

'WETS' PLAN TO CHANGE 'DRY' LAW IN '24

Washington, Nov. 11.—The "wets" in spite of their heavy gains in Tuesday's election, have no hope of passing legislation modifying the Volstead act during the Sixty-eighth Congress.

"Everybody knew this was only a preliminary campaign," he declared. "The Volstead law is the result of a fight lasting thirty-five years. It cannot be changed in one year.

"With Representative George S. Graham of Pennsylvania, an avowed 'wet,' succeeding Volstead as chairman of the judiciary committee, our plan is to bring out a sensible and practical bill and get a roll-call vote on it. We do not expect it to pass, but the record ballot will definitely mark the 'wets' and 'drys' for 1924.

The first section in the proposed bill will be a repeal of the provision in the Volstead law which permits search of automobiles by prohibition agents without warrants.

The present limitation of one-half of 1 per cent. of alcohol in beverages will be increased, possibly to 2.75.

BOYS BEAT AND ROB MAN IN SOUTH BOSTON

A gang of youthful bandits descended on a news stand at Covington and H streets, South Boston, early today, beat the sixty-five-year-old proprietor, Richard O. Wagner, into unconsciousness and escaped down side streets after robbing the cash register of $238.

Wagner, who roomed at No. 10 G street, is said to be dying at the City Hospital.

Four young men, ranging in age from seventeen to twenty-one years, are under arrest. One, who is said to have confessed and to have given the police the names of six other participants in the robbery, is booked for robbery and assault. The other three are being held on blanket suspicious person charges.

Vincent S. Logue, twenty-one years old, of No. 98 Mystic avenue, Somerville, was arrested not far from the store and was alleged to have been the leader of the gang.

The other three suspects are: Robert M. Morrissey, 17 years old, of No. 350 East 5th street; John J. Shine, 18 years old, of No. 10 Dixfield street, and John F. Connors, 20 years old, of No. 881 East 4th street, all of South Boston. All were released later.

Legion Head Gives Armistice Day Message

By ALVIN OWSLEY,
National Commander the American Legion.

Written for Cosmopolitan News Service

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 11.—To the American people, to all persons for whom the armistice, four years ago, brought surcease from suffering, the American Legion today extends greetings.

And to all, who, because of the lessons learned in war, have continued as a labor of love in patriotic purposes and patriotic activities, looking toward a better citizenship, a nation builded for perpetual peace, a people united in furtherance of democracy's ideal, the American Legion extends its hand.

Today the American Legion finds itself committed more than ever to four big principles—hospitalization, rehabilitation, adjusted compensation and Americanization.

TRAFFIC RULE FRAMED FOR AIRPLANES

Washington, Nov. 11.—Proposed Federal traffic regulations for the air are being drafted by the committee on aircraft safety code to be submitted to the Commerce Department.

Traffic rules for aircraft are likely to differ from those governing other types of vehicles. A flying passing another from behind would pass to the right instead of to the left, because the machine in front probably will be following a line on the ground and keeping to the right of it, while this same line is also followed by machines coming from the other direction.

For protection of persons on the ground it would be provided nothing be dropped from any aircraft except water and fine sand which would scatter in falling and hardly be noticed by a person on the ground.

Right of way would be given to a machine in distress, an aircraft would have the right of way over an airplane, and a balloon would have the right of way over both. The relative right of way of machines of the same class is yet to be determined.

PREPARE GIANT DRY DOCK FOR MAJESTIC

Arrangements are now being made for the dry-docking in South Boston of the White Star liner Majestic, the largest liner afloat, which will reach Boston for minor repairs on November 16.

Commander A. C. Bartlett, general marine superintendent of the White Star Lines, Captain Roger Williams, operating manager of the International Mercantile Marine Company, and W. D. Wilson of the Harlan and Wolff shipbuilding firm, Belfast, have already arrived in Boston to confer with navy officials about putting the Majestic in dry-dock.

The Sor' Boston dock is the only one in the world of large enough capacity to take the Majestic out of the water. Captain Sir Bertram Hayes, commanding, will bring the Majestic here, and a corps of tugs will be assigned to her when she enters the harbor.

NASH DEALERS IN SALES CONTEST

Courage and optimism were the keynotes sounded by C. P. Rockwell, New England distributor Nash motor cars, at a luncheon given at the Copley-Plaza, to upwards of one hundred and sixty Nash representatives gathered from all over New England, and which was attended by Charles W. Nash, president, and E. H. McCarty, sales manager of the Nash Motors Co., Kenosha, Wis.

Mr. Rockwell said: "For the fiscal year ending Aug. 31, 1922, we have come within three per cent. of doubling the sale of Nash cars in New England over all of last year. For the calendar year we will more than double the business done a year ago. That is why I am optimistic."

Mr. Nash told the dealers the difficulty in distributing Nash cars all over the country would be increased this year because of railroad troubles. Up to now, he said, many of the Nash cars coming into the eastern territory have been shipped by boat, but in three days, he pointed out, shipping by way of the lake routes would be tied up.

Mr. Nash said up to the close of the contract year 1922, C. P. Rockwell, Inc., had received 8.2 per cent. of the Nash factory production. There is no organization in the Nash Motors Company, he said, which has come to the front as this one during the last year.

Announcement was made of the New England dealer contest, in which all the Nash dealers, with their sub-dealers, are privileged to enter. Four prizes, consisting of two $215 Waltham watches, one $200 Waltham, and $100 in gold are to be awarded to dealers or sub-dealers making the best showing between now and the close of the year.

ARREST WOMAN IN BED IN DRUG CASE

Mrs. Catherine Banett, twenty-four years old, of South Boston, was arrested in bed in a house on Harrison avenue, South End, for illegal possession of drugs, after Officers Caverly, Monahan and Conway of the police "white squadron" arrested the tenant of the apartment, Martin K. Skerratt, twenty-nine years old, for having morphine in his possession.

Skarrett led the officers to his rooms after the arrest, and Mrs. Banett was found.

JAIL SENTENCE FOR DRUNKEN DRIVER

William R. Riley of Station Road, Lincoln, was sentenced in East Cambridge court to three months in jail for driving an automobile while drunk. He appealed and was held in $500 bonds. He had been in court on a similar charge before.

Mary Garden Prefers Donkeys to Men and Tells Why

New York, Nov. 11.—Mary Garden of the Chicago Grand Opera Company prefers donkeys to men. She said so today on her return on the Aquitania from the Swiss Alps. Asked to explain she said:

"I have been climbing the mountains with both donkeys and men, and I found the donkeys much more useful and apparently more appreciative of the magnificent views from the peaks. They were silent, contemplative and seemingly overwhelmed by the spectacle.

"On the other hand, mere man frequently spoiled the scene by banal remarks or inadequately expressed appreciation."

Miss Garden said that if she had to choose a man she would pick one of the type of Henry Ford, "because he does big things and remains human."

ONLY CAVE MAN CAN WIN MARY GARDEN

By Cosmopolitan News Service
Staff Correspondent.

New York, Nov. 11.—What Ponce De Leon vainly hunted throughout Florida, Mary Garden found easily in the Riviera.

Having bathed in the secret fountain of youth she discovered the prima donna of the Chicago Grand Opera Company is back from Europe today with a new store of vitality and a wealth of new graces.

Incidentally, as she stood in the lobby of her hotel, she confided that she was down to 119.

What she is going to do and what she isn't going to do, together with what she likes and doesn't like, were some of the things she told, following her arrival on the Aquitania.

"I'll never marry because I don't care for any man that way," she said. "It would take a cave man with both a gun and a club to capture me."

Still Mary confided she liked some men a bit. There's Bill Hart, who nearly broke her heart when he spoiled her ideal of him when he fell out with his wife.

The great men of the United States for her are William Randolph Hearst, Henry Ford and Frank Munsey, she said.

Speaking of her plans, she said she would not again direct a grand opera company, "just to bother with a lot of spoiled opera stars."

DENY RATE INCREASE AT COAST TERMINALS

Washington, Nov. 11.—Applications of transcontinental railroads for authority to decrease rates to and from Pacific Coast terminals on traffic originating east of the Rocky Mountains or destined therefor, were denied today by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The roads had declared the reduction was necessary to enable them to meet coast to coast competition of steamship lines.

WOMAN FELLOW OF ROYAL SOCIETY HERE

Mrs. M. French-Sheldon, one of the few women fellows of the Royal Geographic Society of London, arrived in Boston today on the liner Winifredian, to raise funds with which to fight sleeping sickness in the Belgian Congo. Mrs. French-Sheldon was decorated by King Albert as a Chevalier of the Order of the Crown, for her work among the natives of the Congo.

JUDGE'S SISTER WEDS SUNDAY

The wedding of Miss Anne Rubenstein, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Moses Rubenstein of No. 103 Winchester street, Brookline, to Morris Silverman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Silverman of No. 282 Columbia road, Roxbury, is of unusual interest to the younger element of Jewish society in Boston.

The ceremony is to take place in Whitney Hall, Brookline, tomorrow evening, Rabbi Harry Levi officiating.

Miss Rubenstein, the sister of Judge Philip Rubenstein of the Juvenile Court of Boston, is a graduate of the Sargent School, a leader in many of the Jewish social and charitable organizations of the city, and active in all civic work. Mr. Silverman, treasurer of a local manufacturing company, is well known in local fraternal organizations, and during the war was in the Pay Corps of the United States Navy.

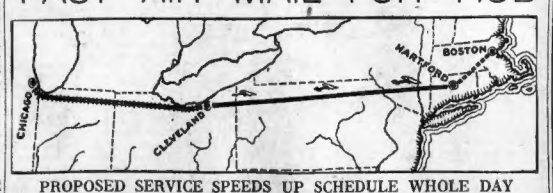
FAST AIR MAIL FOR HUB



PROPOSED SERVICE SPEEDS UP SCHEDULE WHOLE DAY

Boston may soon have the fast air mail service that other sections of the country are already receiving. After a test between Chicago and Hartford, Conn., the postal authorities are considering extension of this route to this city.

Special mail pouches were taken to Cleveland by train, carried to New York over the regular air route and transferred by another fast mail plane to Hartford.

Officials who accompanied the pouches were enthused over the trial. The trip from Chicago to Hartford, including the train service to Cleveland, cut an entire day from the regular schedule.

$500,000 PAINTING, LONG MISSING, FOUND

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Nov. 11.—A missing painting by Claude Lorraine, seventeen century artist, said to be valued at $500,000 and for which a search has been made for years, was discovered today in the recreation room of the Knights of Columbus Home here. The building formerly was the residence of Mrs. W. J. Averill, stepmother of Mrs. E. H. Harriman, widow of the railroad financier. The picture is a 3x5 canvas, entitled "The Poet of Messina." The title is written on the back of the canvas, and the signature of the artist appears upon its face.

FLOCK OF NEW PLAYS FOR BOSTON NEXT WEEK

It's a long time since such a brilliant festival of dramatic entertainment was offered to Boston theatre goers, and the newspaper critic who is asked to review an opening on Monday night is rather bewildered.

At the Plymouth there is the O'Neill drama which created a sensation in New York last season, "Anna Christie." The Theatre Guild, which can be depended upon for artistic productions, brings "He Who Gets Slapped," the curious French play of the circus, with a clown or a hero, into the Hollis.

"Captain Applejack," which succeeds the Cohan show at the Tremont, was produced by his late partner Sam Harris, and this is a rather imaginative and fantastic affair for a so-called commercial manager to offer. Harris is competing with himself at the Selwyn where "It's a Boy" is being presented, a naive domestic sort of comedy by the author of "Six Cylinder Love."

George White has some more "Scandals" to offer us at the Colonial. Rumor has it that this show is much better than last year's White entertainment.

"The Law Breaker," a Brady production which did not reach Boston, is being offered for the first time here by the St. James Theatre Stock Company. Meanwhile the San Carlo Opera Company puts on "Boheme," making a total of seven new bills, not counting the vaudeville at the Majestic and Keith's theatres, and the usual burlesque shifts.

"He Who Gets Slapped"

Baffling, gripping, symbolic, exotic, picturesque, evasive, are only a few of the words used by critics in attempting to describe the fascination which Andreyev's play, "He Who Gets Slapped," which comes to the Hollis Street Theatre on Monday, holds for the theatre-goer.

Perhaps it is none of these and had the reviewers not been so intent upon discovering some less obvious reason they would have given a thought to the fact that the drama embodies one of the strongest threads of love interest ever seen upon the stage and it is this love, the love of a clown, that has made "He Who Gets Slapped" one of the outstanding successes of the decade.

Richard Bennett as "He," who risks even his hopes of the hereafter that Consuelo, the pure, sweet embodiment of his love, may be saved from the clutches of an admitted libertine, reaches the highest pinnacle of achievement.

"Anna Christie"

Eugene O'Neill's most popular play "Anna Christie," comes to the Plymouth Monday night under the direction of Arthur Hopkins. This is the play that won the Pulitzer prize for the best drama in America last year.

The play is doubly distinguished in that its principal actress, Pauline Lord, an actress who has been for years playing skilfully and finely without much hullabaloo, came overnight into long-delayed laurels through her personation of the hapless Anna Christie. As the play was generally voted the most important of the American product for the year, so Miss Lord's performance was usually adjudged the best acting achievement of the year.

George Marion, an older actor, also of fine record, fell in for almost equally emphatic approbation for his characterization in the play of an old sea captain. Both these players are in the cast which will present the play in Boston for the first time together with Frank Shannon, who has the third important part.

"It's a Boy"

At the Selwyn Theatre, Sam H. Harris will present for the first time in Boston, William Anthony McGuire's comedy drama, "It's a Boy." The same cast of players that has been seen in the play at the Sam H. Harris Theatre, New York, for some months past, will appear in the performance of it here.

In "It's a Boy," Mr. McGuire has written a story with which most people are familiar, that is, familiar with the incidents of which it is made. While the story is simple as life itself, his clever treatment of it has made it interesting and loveable.

He tells of the trials of a young small-town merchant upon whose thriving business an unscrupulous syndicate has cast covetous eyes and which finally succeeds in crushing him out, and of the extravagancies of a young wife that brings the shadow of a domestic tragedy hovering above their home until the love of both parents for the baby boy dispels it.

That he succeeded is now a matter of theatrical history. Among the players are Robert Ames, Dorothy MacKaye, Joseph Kilgour, John E. Murphy, Jean Adair, Charles Lawrence, Hortense Alden, Millicent Hanley, Richard Pitman, Peter Lang and Charles Hilton.

"Captain Applejack"

On Monday at the Tremont Theatre Sam H. Harris will present, for the first time out of New York, "Captain Applejack," a new comedy by Walter Hackett, with Wallace Eddinger and Mary Nash as its stars.

Mr. Hackett calls his comedy "an Arabian Nights adventure in three acts." Its hero, Ambrose Applejohn, is a timid young man who lives in a Cornwall coast village, a tiny town over which hang thickly legends of its former inhabitants. These early citizens of the village were the boldest of brigands and tales of their buried treasure are the conversational coin of the town.

One day Ambrose makes the startling discovery that one of his ancestors was none other than the notorious Captain Applejack, as bold a pirate as ever roved the Spanish Main. Thenceforward Ambrose's life is changed. He reverts to type, and the adventures that then befall him supply the swiftly changing comedy situations of the play.

Mr. Harris has assembled a remarkable company to support Mr. Eddinger and Miss Nash.

"George White's Scandals"

The 1922 version of the famous "George White's Scandals" is to be presented at the Colonial Theatre, for a limited engagement, commencing Monday evening. This premier will mark the fourth consecutive production in a series of revues inaugurated by Mr. White in 1919.

Buddy de Sylva and E. Ray Goetz supplied the lyrics for the newest Scandals, which is to be given in two acts and twenty odd scenes. The tuneful score is by George Gershwin. George White, W. C. Fields and Andy Rice are credited with the sketches and dialogue.

The entire production has been staged by the youthful producer, who has succeeded in engaging a formidable cast. In addition to Paul Whiteman's Palais Royal New York orchestra, the long list of entertainers will include W. C. Fields, Lester Allen, the Lightner Girls and Alexander, Franklin Ardell, Pearl Regay, Mary Lawlor, Richard Bold, Charlie Wilkins, the Argentine Dancers, the Temple Quartette, Myra Cullen, Olive Vaughn, Edna May Reed, Sally Long, Helen Le Vonne, Peggy Dolan, Marion Courtney, Dolores Costello, Mildred Lannery, Anna Burnelle, Ann Paulson, Mildred Shelly, Vera Coburn, Marie Adams, Catherine Chapman, Sylvia Kingsley, Catherine Ringquest, Virginia Webb, many others and George White.

A Lot of Merry Rogues in "Beggar's Opera"

Undoubtedly the keynote of "The Beggar's Opera," now in its second week at the Fine Arts Theatre, is found in Peachum's observation. "A rich rogue now-a-days is fit company for any gentleman and the world my dear, hath not such a contempt for roguery as you imagine."

The extraordinary vitality of this old play has demonstrated how shrewdly the author understood human nature in putting that speech, poser, Davico, will also be presented, and, to close the program, d'Indy's great Symphony in B flat.

For before the appearance of "The Beggar's Opera" it was notorious that the English stage, and the fiction of the times, were drowning under the stereotyped, artificial speech and manners of puppet lords and ladies.

The basic idea of making his heroes and heroines from rogues and thieves, grafters and philanders or, in the underworld parlance of today, the dips, yeggs, gatsmen, peister twitchers, stick-ups, petermans, dopes, drunkards and smugglers came to Gay from Swift.

It was the suggestion of a "Newgate Pastoral" contained in a letter Swift wrote to Pope. The hitherto unsuccessful Gay seized upon the idea, and from the presentation of "The Beggar's Opera" at Lincoln's Inn Fields Theatre, London, January 29, 1737, his success was made.

Etta and George Glad to Be Back

"It seems mighty good to be back in Boston, if only for a week. I have missed the Hub keenly during the three years I have been away from the city. In the show business, of course, one has to be subject to bookings and routes and all that, but I did think it rather hard that I happened to go three seasons without even seeing one of the cities where I feel most at home. Boston is a wonderful place and, from an actor's standpoint, one of the blue-ribbon communities of the country."

These pleasant words for Boston were spoken by George Stone, the famous comedian who is at the Gayety Theatre next week, with Etta Pillard, his vivacious comedy partner. They head the cast of "The Social Maids," the wonderful company which is presenting "The Boys from Home." The fact that Stone and Pillard are back in town after three years' absence makes the week a particularly big one at the Gayety.

Nora Bayes at Majestic Theatre

Nora Bayes is the feature with "The Midnite Revels," at the Majestic Theatre for next week, coming here especially for the occasion with an entire new act, in the vaudeville and musical revue are several Boston favorites including Whipple and Huston, and Riggs and Witchie, who need no introduction to theatre-goers of this city.

Nora Bayes.

The revue was written by Whipple and Huston and both appear in prominent characters throughout the revue. Riggs and Witchie, an equally clever team, present an entirely different act, being classical dancers.

The company has been on the road but a few weeks, just long enough to get into good shape and not long enough to take the newness and the glisten from the scenery and costumes; originality is the keynote of "The Midnite Revels." It is hard telling which forms the greatest part of the entertainment, the vaudeville or the revue, as it is said to be one of the liveliest of the Shubert units so far this season.

Looks Down Muzzle of a Real Gun

Avery Hopwood and Mary Roberts Rinehart, the authors of "The Bat," which is now filling every seat at the Wilbur Theatre eight times a week, have utilized with excellent effect the old idea of weakening mankind's indifference to and ignorance of fire-arms.

Anna Morrison

In the first act of "The Bat," Effie Elisler, who plays the patrician spinster, Cornelia Van Gorder, informs the detective Anderson, who is called in to investigate the mystery of the haunted house, that she has equipped herself with a revolver, just for her own personal protection.

Then she remarks with sublime naivete as she looks down the muzzle of the revolver, "I know so little about these things that if I didn't hit a burglar, I'd certainly hit somebody or something."

It is worth noting just the same that before the curtain falls on "The Bat," Miss Elisler seems to have acquired an expert's knowledge of fire-arms.

Whether this is an inconsistency of the play's authors or Miss Elisler has been playing possum with the credulous detective one cannot determine. But the fact remains that just at the end of this thrilling mystery play, Miss Elisler confounds the arch criminal of the plot by telling him that she has extracted the bullets from his gun, and then when he throws it to the floor in disgust, she quietly demonstrates that the revolver is actually loaded and turning to the audience remarks, "This is the first lie of an otherwise blameless life."

Six-Year-Old Marvel in "Curse of Drink"

The six-year-old child heroine that drew sobs and smiles as the little daughter in "Smilin' Through"—Norma Talmadge's latest picture—is again to be seen in a similar role in "The Curse of Drink," which opens a limited engagement at the Globe Theatre on Monday next.

Baby Batista has been called "Jackie Coogan's Screen Sister," for she is as popular among girls fans as Jackie is among the kiddies. This child prodigy has appeared in more plays and pictures than any other juvenile star.

She acted with Maude Adams in "A Kiss for Cinderella"; played in "Floradora," "Doll's House" and "The Red Dawn," on the dramatic stage. Her screen career began with "Humoresque," and included the leading child roles in "Boomerang Bill," "Just Around the Corner," "Eye for Eye," "Smilin' Through," "At the Stage Door" and "Humoresque."

How she managed to squeeze so much in her seven years of life is a mystery. In her latest picture, "The Curse of Drink," Miriam has a very important part to play. It is for her sake that the Sanford family, at first torn with strife, is united. The winning ways of the little girl and the fond affection that the parents have for her bring happiness again into the household.

Cantor Getting to Be a Real Actor

Eddie Cantor, like Al Joison, has pretty nearly escaped from the burnt cork phase of the acting business. In the revue at the Shubert he exhibits himself blacked up just enough to make you remember that he is the same little fellow with the white rims to his spectacles who made you laugh in the Follies several seasons ago.

Cantor is getting to be a first class character comedian and if you doubt it look at that taxicab scene at the Shubert. In this sketch he plays a ferocious looking taxi-driver and succeeds in being funnier than I ever saw him before, without performing in the least like the Cantor we are familiar with.

PADEREWSKI COMING

In the opinion of many, the most important concert of the season will be that of Paderewski, the great Polish pianist, which will take place in Symphony Hall on Wednesday afternoon, November 29.

Having retired from politics, he has recently arrived in this country in preparation for the tour which will mark his return to the concert stage.

HEMPEL AS JENNY LIND

Frieda Hampel, the great coloratura soprano of concert and opera, will give a concert in Symphony Hall on Sunday afternoon, December 3, at 2:30.

She will repeat in Boston her Jenny Lind program, which was so successful at the centenary celebration in New York. The program, the costumes, the piano, and stage decorations are all faithfully copied from the records of concerts by the "Swedish Nightingale."

FRED McISAAC says that—

"THE BAT" remains at the Wilbur, survivor of all attractions which opened on Labor Day, and likely to last many months longer.

EDDIE CANTOR, equally funny in black face or white, heads the elaborate revue, "Make It Snappy," which packed the Shubert at all performances last week.

"THE BEGGAR'S OPERA," the revival of a very old English operetta at the Fine Arts Theatre, is delightful alike to dramatic and musical student and layman. It's an extraordinary singing company.

"ONE EXCITING NIGHT" survives at the Tremont Temple; still drawing large audiences to D. W. Griffith's first invasion of the field of mystery melodrama.

MARION DAVIES in "When Knighthood Was in Flower" continues its phenomenal run at the Park Theatre.

BIG SHOW AT GAYETY THEATRE

George Stone and Etta Pillard Coming in Hurtig's "Social Maids."

George Stone and Etta Pillard, the notable burlesque favorites who have been absent from Boston for three years, are coming to the Gayety Theatre for week beginning next Monday, Nov. 13.

Etta Pillard.

This announcement comes as one of the most important of the new season in Boston musical shows. Mr. Stone and Miss Pillard are tremendously popular in this city. Their return after such long absence will be hailed with great pleasure by their many friends among burlesque patrons of the Metropolitan district.

Stone and Pillard, as the famous comedian and the vivacious comedienne are familiarly called, will come as the featured members of Joe Hurtig's "Social Maids," presenting the new musical burlesque entitled "The Boys From Home."

The fact that these two celebrated funmakers will head the cast is proof in advance that the production will be marked by speed, action and hilarious comedy. The burlesquing of this pair and their ability to slip over a laugh when least expected—right in the middle of song or dance number, if the thought strikes them—have been greatly missed by their thousands of admirers.

LAWBREAKERS AT SAINT JAMES

Big New York Success Offers Many Thrills for the Theatregoer.

The story of "The Law Breakers," which Mr. William A. Brady produced at the Booth Theatre, New York city, with William Courtenay and Miss Blanche Yurka, is a fascinating tale by Jules Eckert Goodman, and deals interestingly with those who shatter the statutes.

"The Law Breakers" will come to the St. James Theatre next week, when the Boston Stock Company will be seen in a drama that held the attention of New York theatregoers for an unlimited run. Robbery of a bank has set the police upon the hunt for the perpetrator and a discussion at the home of the banker whose institution has been looted, turns upon the question as to the proper remedy to cure crime and rid the world of criminals. The father of the family and head of the bank advocates swift and drastic punishment; his daughter believes that the remedy is elsewhere and is supported in her theories by a priest who is one of the company, and who declares that crime, in his opinion, is somewhat akin to disease. At this point a private detective employed by the bank enters and announces that he has traced some of the missing securities to the possession of the banker's son, and immediately the banker, who a moment before was recommending the most condign punishment for the thief, right about faces and wants to protect the suspected son, who has fallen into the hands of a band of thieves.

ARLINGTON THEATRE

The Arlington Theatre, the only Boston amusement resort represented by colored players, will fall into line for its third week of "Seven Eleven," the Garland Howard musical frolic, with several stars of magnitude, special acts and new surprises. The new program promised for the coming week is one of exceptional quality.

Colored revues as we know them, sprang from humble beginnings in the music halls, variety shows and dime museums that catered to the uncultured and uncritical American masses of twenty or more years ago. Even the appearance of colored actors, singers and mimics, or other entertainment specialists, suggested to managers and critics that the scheme of presenting colored people on the stage could be refined and elevated and before long could take equal place with the "Legitimate" in the estimation of the great theatre-going public. Result "Shuffle Along" and "Seven Eleven."

LOEW'S ORPHEUM THEATRE

Rodolph Valentino, first as a college hero at Harvard, then as a gorgeous young prince of India, is the treat promised for screen fans, when Valentino's latest picture, "The Young Rajah," is presented at Loew's Orpheum Theatre during the coming week. Never has Valentino been given such wonderful opportunity as in this picture, which depicts a story vibrant with passionate love scenes and dazzling with gorgeous settings and costumes. The entire piece is thrill-swept with adventure and mystery. Wanda Hawley, a remarkably clever actress, plays opposite Valentino and heads a great supporting cast. In every respect, "The Young Rajah" is a wonderful picture, with an ideal role for the star and a remarkable entertainment. A vaudeville program of the highest grade is also on the bill and is headed by Frederic Santley & Co., in a fantastic musical and dance extravaganza called "Dance Dreams."

ELMAN'S SECOND CONCERT

The second concert of the season by Mischa Elman, the great Russian violinist, will take place in Symphony Hall on Sunday afternoon, November 19, at 2:30. His program, will include the Concerto in G minor, by Vivaldi-Naches, Sonata by Cesar Franck, Lalo's Symphonic Espagnole, Adagio of Mozart-Friedberg, Hungarian Dance in F-sharp minor, Brahms; a transcription of "Bill Bill" by Elman, and the Caprice Basque by Sarasate, in the performance of the Franck Sonata the piano part will be taken by Mischa Elman's sister, Lisa Elman.

PENSION FUND CONCERT

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will give a splendid program at its Pension Fund concert in Symphony Hall tomorrow afternoon at 2:30. The music will be entirely Russian.

Pierre Monteux has chosen the following brilliant and melodious orchestral numbers: Rimsky-Korsakov's "Scheherazade," Glazounov's "Stenka Razine," the dances from Borodin's "Prince Igor," and Tschaikovsky's "1812" overture.

LOWRIE RECITAL

Adrienne Lowrie, lyric soprano, is to give a recital at Jordan Hall on Saturday afternoon, December 9.

VALENTINO AT LOEW'S STATE

"Young Rajah" Greatest Love Drama in Which Star Ever Appeared

A program of extraordinary proportions, including Rodolph Valentino, the screen's most perfect lover, Clara Kimball Young, the popular emotional star, and Larry Semon, the king of Screen Comedy, will be the offering at Loew's State Theatre for the coming week. In "The Young Rajah," Valentino is presented in the greatest love-drama in which he has ever been filmed. He is first shown as a virile American college athlete, then as a gorgeous Prince of India braving death for the charming Yankee girl he loves. The story is one that sweeps you from New York's glittering ballrooms into the ageless mystery and passions of the Orient. Produced on a sumptuous scale, with settings and costumes of dazzling splendor, "The Young Rajah" is more sumptuous in its love scenes than "The Sheik" and more spectacular than "Blood and Sand." The brilliant supporting cast includes Wanda Hawley, Charles Ogle, Maude Wayne, and several others of note.

NEW FIRE CAPTAIN FOR SOMERVILLE

Somerville's youngest fire captain, in both point of age and years of service, Captain James F. Ward, appointed by Mayor Wescott and unanimously confirmed by the aldermen, has been assigned to the command of Engine 1, at the Central Fire Station. He is president of the Somerville Firemen's Relief Association, and has been a member of the department fourteen years, serving for the last eight years as lieutenant at Hose 3 in Union square.

Capt. J. F. Ward.

He resides at No. 27 Walnut street and has two children, James F. Ward, fourteen years old, and Elizabeth, six years.

Captain Ward was born in Somerville February 26, 1873, and was appointed to the department as a private in September, 1908.

$28,000 DRAFT TURNS DESPAIR INTO JOY

Los Angeles, Nov. 11.—Mrs. Reta B. Rea, whose grandfather founded the Tiffany jewelry firm in New York, was penniless and despondent. Her young husband is ill in Arizona. Despair was turned into joy when she received an unexpected draft for $28,000 from a rich bachelor uncle.

PONSELLE TO SING HERE TOMORROW

It seems almost a useless task to retell the story of Rosa Ponselle. Since that evening three years ago when her debut on the stage of the Metropolitan Opera House was so electrified as to send the name of Rosa Ponselle flying throughout the country, the tale of her humble beginning and meteoric rise to success has become a byword with music-lovers. For the benefit of those few, however, who will hear Miss Ponselle in her concert tomorrow night at the symphony Hall, Rosa Ponselle was born in Meriden, Connecticut, the daughter of poor and humble Italian-American parents.

Hers was the typical childhood with such advantages as the local public school education might offer. Though the young girl had always wanted to sing and had been fortunate in having the musical environment that surrounds any Italian family, she never enjoyed any vocal instruction in her youth. Yet she and her elder sister, Carmela, finally were awarded an opportunity to sing in vaudeville and in such capacity the two remained until the Spring of 1918, when they were heard at the Rivera Theatre, New York, by the teacher who persuaded them to study under his supervision.

The Fall of that same year found Rosa Ponselle a member of the Metropolitan. Her debut came in November, when she sang with Enrico Caruso in the revival of Verdi's opera, "La Forza del Destino." Miss Ponselle's success was brilliant; she was hailed as the greatest young singer of her generation. Since then she has steadily mounted the heights of fame.

SOMERVILLE PLAYERS

"The Bird of Paradise," a play by Richard Walter Tully, with its Hawaiian atmosphere, quaint rites and ceremonies and eccentric characters, will be presented at the Somerville Theatre, by the Somerville players, during the coming week.

McCORMACK IN SECOND CONCERT

For the second time this season, the old-time spell of John McCormack was cast over a huge gathering which taxed to the utmost the capacity of Symphony Hall.

The program was a joy in its range of material and in the delight of each individual song. There was a majority in favor of the old Irish folk songs that nobody else sings in the way that Mr. McCormack does—just simply and unaffectedly holding in the palm of his hand the emotions of a vast throng.

Rudolph Bochco, violinist, assisted with a few numbers. Edwin Schneider played the thoroughly splendid accompaniments that he always gives his artist.

Probably the peak of the evening from the point of view of most of the audience was the last number, "The Lost Chord," Arthur Sullivan, with organ obligato by Albert W. Snow. This was immensely effective.

Half a dozen or more encores were added by Mr. McCormack, including "Mother Machree," sung with his back to the audience.

SAN CARLO SECOND WEEK

The San Carlo Opera Company begins the second and final week of its engagement at the Boston Opera House Monday evening, with "Boheme"; Anna Fitziu as Mimi, Miss Charlebois as Musetta, Mr. Bonacci, Mr. Valle and Mr. De Biasi will appear in the principal roles. "Cavaleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci" make up the double bill announced for Tuesday night. In the former, Miss Aiman, Miss De Mette, Mr. Barra and Mr. Interrante will be heard. For the second half of the program, Miss Charlebois, Miss Aiman and Mr. Rosoli are cast.

"Carmen" for the matinee on Wednesday again presents Aime. Esther Ferrabini. With her will appear Miss Charlebois, Mr. Paranda, Mr. Interrante and Mr. DeBiasi. In the evening the opera is the "Barber of Seville," with Miss Lucchese, the coloratura soprano of the company, as Rosina, and Miss Klimova, Mr. Bonacci, Mr. Valle and Mr. DeBiasi.

STATE BALLROOM

There is an increasing attendance in every session of the select and refined dancing parties held at Loew's State Theatre Ballroom on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings in addition to holiday evenings.

RECITAL IS GIVEN BY PARANOV

Considering the fact that Mr. Paranov had never played the piano or anything else up to the age of fourteen, his recital at Jordan Hall showed rather surprising results. One more demonstration of what Russian application can do.

The program that Mr. Paranov chose was quite interesting in the collection of novelties that it showed. Not very many of the old standbys that pianists usually select were featured on this occasion—on the contrary, there were charming little numbers exquisitely done that are all too seldom heard on a concert program.

Certain of the numbers, the Chopin Ballade in F minor, chiefly, and two Debussy sketches, showed some rather unusual poetic feeling. There were very satisfactory shades of tone color and a nice discrimination in phrasing and rhythm.

CATHOLIC CLUB AT TECH PLANS DANCE

The Catholic Club of Technology will give its first informal dance of the semester in the main hall of Walker Memorial, next Friday evening, November 17. The Copley-Plaza Orchestra will furnish the music and the matrons are Mrs. T. F. Tracy, Mrs. P. R. Giblin, Mrs. S. C. Hutchins and Mrs. King.

The committee in charge of the affair is L. J. Tracy, '23; George Rowan, '23; H. C. Bailey, '24; J. E. Elliot, '24, and J. W. Sullivan, '23, president of the club.

PARK STILL PACKS 'EM IN

Marion Davies in "Knighthood" Continues Great Success in Boston.

The engagement of Marion Davies in "When Knighthood Was in Flower" is continuing at the Park Theatre, in unprecedented popularity and providing the happy spectacle of a succession of capacity audiences twice daily. Tomorrow, Sunday, there will be two performances, at 3 and 8:15 p. m.

The merits of the picture are of such special excellence that the favor won by the production is quite a natural consequence. In thoroughness and completeness, in scrupulous attention to detail and preservation of historical verities this production must be rated as the most commendable achievement of American producers. Running in hand with their distinction is the manner whereby it is presented in a theatre perfectly appointed and decorated so that an atmosphere is created that places the spectator in proper mood to view the pictured romance of the days of Bluff King Hal. Supplementing this is the presence of a large orchestra playing an original musical score perfectly synchronizing with the unrolling of the picture. It is a combination of embellishments the like of which has seldom, if ever, been seen in Boston.

MARION DAVIES

"Marion Davies in 'When Knighthood Was In Flower,' has leaped into instant popularity at the Park, duplicating the experience in New York, Chicago and London, where it is enjoying a success hitherto unduplicated in the showing of photoplays. WHEN KNIGHTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER

MOTHER-IN-LAW AND BRIDE IN FISTICUFFS

Mrs. Ida Fendel Korb of Revere, bride in a secret court marriage with Dr. Harry Korb, Roxbury physician, came to blows with her mother-in-law when the latter refused to sanction a religious marriage, according to Mrs. Frank Fendel, mother of the bride.

As a result of the clash, and the protracted absence of the husband, who has been in New York for several months, the younger Mrs. Korb has entered suit in the Superior Court against her parents-in-law for $50 000, for alienation of her husband's affections.

SET-TO IN PARLOR.

The alleged set-to took place in the parlor at No. 28 Slavin street, Roxbury, the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis I. Korb, the husband's parents. Mr. Korb is a wealthy lace merchant, with offices on Bedford street.

"The meeting in the Korb home was a stormy anticlimax to the grand engagement party of a few months earlier, which Mrs. Korb put on," said Mrs. Fendel. "That engagement party beat anything I've ever seen for extravagance.

"Then she thought a lot of the couple. But this time it was a different story. Harry was on the mat, and Papa Korb acted as prosecuting attorney. When he was through, Harry walked out with head bowed.

"My daughter jumped up then and demanded to be allowed to talk with him. She started for the door, but Mrs. Korb intercepted her and they clinched.

MOTHER BLAMED.

"I place the blame on Dr. Korb's mother. She was angry because she says she sent him through college, and so she thinks he is too good even for a president's daughter.

"Nobody was more surprised than I to learn of the secret wedding, and yet I am charged with helping Ida get Harry to elope. When I heard of it, I did the one thing there was to do — demanded a religious ceremony.

"Since the scene which followed in Roxbury, Harry has been sending my daughter a check for $17.50 every week. Lately it came from his mother in the form of a money order."

BIGGEST ACT IN SHOW BUSINESS

Mr. George Choos' "Realm of Fantasie" at Keith's next week is by far the biggest act ever presented in vaudeville. The prolific producer is to be given credit for bringing to this country the most magnificent scenic ever presented in the American public. The "Laceland Follies" is the current "Ziegfeld Follies" is the talk of the theatrical world.

Mary Haynes

The costumes are all made of lace and are painted with Radiana paint which Mr. Choos brought pre America. When the lights go out the costumes glow with a mass of fire and color. This scene is being used in a magnificent finale to his revue. One can gain an idea of the tremendous cost of this revue when it is known that each costume of the Laceland Ballet represents an outlay of $800 for the chiffon and laces applied with the radium paint, making it the most gorgeous and costliest scene ever presented on the vaudeville stage.

Society Girls as Mannikins at Fashion Show Next Week, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN.

A GORGEOUS feast for the eyes is promised those who attend the two-day bazaar being held at the Copley-Plaza next Wednesday and Thursday. The affair is in aid of the Florence Crittenton League, and a very "ultra" fashion show is to be one of the strongest drawing cards.

Society girls will parade as mannikins on this occasion, two of the latter being the Misses Joan Barton of Chestnut Hill and Miss Lucy Currier, daughter of Mrs. Guy Currier. The last named is general chairman of the whole affair.

The most exclusive shops in town are to show their newest models—hot from the fashion plate. There will be dainty tea gowns, stunning evening gowns, demure frocks for the debutantes, gorgeous wraps of the softest furs, smart tailored suits and three-piece costumes, to say nothing of natty chapeaux and purse-tempting footgear.

SPEAKING of fashion shows—Miss Cornelia Robb, one of New York's most prominent debutantes, who has a host of Boston connections, helped Miss Cathleen Vanderbilt sell programs at the charity fashion show held the other day in Gotham at the Hotel Plaza.

In the afternoon, the leading lights of Broadway paraded before an enthralled audience of feminine spectators, while in the evening the models were chosen from the ranks of the Social Register folk. The gowns all came from the shop of Clintra, or the Hon. Mrs. John Fortescue, as she is known in private life. Most of the creations shown had very alluring names, such as "Smiling Hours," "Morning Mist," "Molten Gold," while a gray velvet was "London Fog." Another, a dancing frock of turquoise blue edged with white ermine, was called "The Blue Bird."

I NOTE that Judge William H. Moore, who Summers at Pride's Crossing, is among the boxholders for the thirty-seventh annual Horse Show, which opens in New York on Monday.

Those who attended the last Myopia Horse Show in September remember the thunder of applause which greeted Judge Moore when he drove his splendid four-in-hand coach onto the field. It was a most unusual sight, especially as hundreds of the very latest type of motor cars lined all sides of the field.

MISS MARY JAMES, a debutante of last season, and as interested as ever in her art studies, was among those who attended the Dansant held on Thursday afternoon at the Copley-Plaza in aid of the Women's Municipal League.

The younger daughter of the Edward Jameses, who is very tall and slim, wore a brocaded blouse of Alice blue and a hat to match, which became her very well, and matched almost to perfection the blueness of her eyes.

Speaking of Thursday's Dansant, I thought that Mrs. Reggy Foster and Mrs. Hendricks H. Whitman, who served as judges in the competition dances, presented a striking contrast. Mrs. Foster is petite and very vivacious, while her friend Mrs. Whitman is extremely tall, and on Thursday, at least, she seemed not at all vivacious.

DR. AND MRS. T. MORRIS MURRAY had planned to present their youngest daughter, Miss Rosamond, next Tuesday afternoon at a tea, to take place at their Marlboro street home. However, invitations to this affair have been recalled, owing to the recent death of the bud's uncle, Henry Bowdoin, of Baltimore.

It is to be presumed that Dr. Murray and his wife, who travel about a good deal, will later in the season entertain for Rosamond as charmingly as they did two years ago for their other daughter, Miss Mary Murray, who is now studying music in France.

ON Tuesday evening comes the large tea dance at the Country Club, at which Mrs. Galen Stone is presenting her daughter, Miss Barbara Stone, one of the season's buds recently elected to the Junior League.

SOREL COMES TO OPERA HOUSE

At the Boston Opera House the week beginning Monday, November 27th, she famous French actress, Mlle. Cecile Sorel and a company representing the French national theatre, the Comedie Francaise in a repertoire of modern and classic masterpieces in French, will appear.

This is the first time in a quarter of a century that a company representing the Comedie Francaise has been permitted by the French government to come to the United States, the last occasion being in 1897, when the organization headed by the great Coquelin came here for a short tour when the Comedie Francaise was being remodeled.

Five plays will be given during the week at the Boston Opera House, the repertoire being chosen from a series of plays in which the beautiful and talented Cecile Sorel has established a reputation in Paris second only to that of Sarah Bernhardt. They include Emil Augier's "L'Aventuriere" (The Adventuress), Alexander Dumas's "Demi-Monde" and "La Demi Monde," Henri Lavedans "Le Duel," Moliere's "Le Misanthrope" and "Tartuffe," and Paul Delair's adaptation of Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew."

These plays reveal the rich range of La Belle Sorel's art calling for all varieties of expression from intense emotionalism to broad comedy, and permitting her to make the sartorial display which has stamped her as the most remarkably gowned woman in Paris—which is to say the world.

EDGAR GUEST LECTURES HERE THURSDAY.

Edgar A. Guest, the distinguished humorist, poet and lecturer, will make his Boston debut at Symphony Hall next Thursday evening. Mr. Guest for many years was a column conductor on the Detroit Free Press, a writer of verse which tugs at the heart strings or bubbles over with merriment, a maker of epigrams which go to complete Breakfast Table Chat, one of the most quoted columns in the United States. He was president of the American Press Humorists in 1913. His books include "A Heap of Livin," "Just Folks," "Over Here," "The Path to Home," "When Day Is Done."

FIVE EXTRA CONCERTS BY SYMPHONY

The series of five extra Boston Symphony concerts which were started last year have been so highly successful that they are to be repeated during the present season. They will take place in Symphony Hall on Monday evenings as before, and indeed have come to be known as the "Monday Evening Concerts." The dates will be as follows: December 11, January 29, February 19, March 26 and April 23.

Pierre Monteux will present regular symphonic programmes giving emphasis to the established masterpieces of the orchestral repertory.

A notable list of soloists will add to the interest of each concert. They will include two pianists, Ernest Schelling, known as a composer as well as a virtuoso of rare brilliance, and Magdeleine Brard, the young French artist, who surprised Boston by the maturity and beauty of her playing when she appeared as a prodigy two years ago.

The singers will be Esther Ferrabini Jacchia, the noted operatic soprano, and Florence Macbeth, like wise a soprano, who is one of the leading singers of the Chicago Opera Company. There will be one violinist, Renee Chemet who has not yet appeared in Boston, but of whom the most enthusiastic reports come from elsewhere.

SPAIN DENOUNCES TREATIES WITH U. S.

Madrid, Nov. 11 (By the Associated Press).—The Spanish government, it is announced today, denounced on Nov. 5 the commercial agreement made with the United States April 1, 1906, under which Spain accorded the United States most favored nation treatment, with the exception of special advantages conceded to Portugal, while the United States agreed to special rates of duty upon certain Spanish products, notably crude tartar, brandies and wines.

Article III. of the agreement provided the treaty should continue in force until one year after it had been denounced by either of the contracting parties. Consequently the agreement will cease to have effect Nov. 5, 1923.

Divorcee to Wed

EMILY DRANGE

New York, Nov. 11 — Woodson Lynn Overman, star of "Just Married," is to wed Miss Emily Drange "The Model Chorus Girl" of the Ziegfeld Follies.

Overman, who gave his home at the Lambs Club and his birthplace at Marysville, Mo., in his application for the license, stated he was divorced from Sylva A. Overman in Chicago on November 9, 1920. Miss Drange was divorced from Marsie Lieberman in Providence, R. I., September 24, 1920. She was born in New York and her father was Gustave Drange.

In August, 1921, Mrs. Sidonie Scee, sued her husband, John W. Steel Ziegfeld tenor, for separation. She mentioned Miss Emily Drange and Olive Vaughn as two of the women with whom her husband was "quite too friendly."

CURSE OF DRINK AT GLOBE

"The Curse of Drink," a melodrama with suspense and thrills in abundance, mingled with romance and comedy, will be presented for a limited engagement at the Globe Theatre beginning next Monday afternoon. The story is about the home and depicts the dream of a poor stenographer, engaged to marry the son of a railroad president, which is almost shattered by the villany of a rejected rival. The final thrill of this great melodrama pictures a terrific chase after a runaway train, going seventy miles an hour over a zig-zag road and driving heading into a flood, with the fathers of two lovers threatened by a watery grave. The real treat of the picture is the wonderful acting of the exceptionally fine cast, which contains at least five supreme stars, all of whom have won fame upon stage and screen. Heading the cast is Harry Morey, the strong man of the screen, who plays the father of the Sanford family; Miriam Batista, the seven year old child heroine of Rimland; Edmund Breese, Marguerite Clayton and George Fawcett have all won signal honors as finished artists. Other film features will also be shown.

DR. BLOODGOOD TO ADDRESS DENTISTS

Dr. J. C. Bloodgood.

Dr. Joseph C. Bloodgood of the Johns Hopkins Medical School, Baltimore, the leading expert on cancer of the mouth, will address a large gathering of dentists and medical students tonight at the Boston Medical Library, No. 8 Fenway, Back Bay. Dr. Eugene R. Kelly, Massachusetts commissioner of public health, will also speak. The meeting is preliminary to the opening of "National Cancer Week" tomorrow, and aims to secure the co-operation of all dentists.

HERO WOODFILL GETS $10,000 PRESENT

New York, Nov. 11—A gift of $10,000, an additional $2,500 life insurance policy, and the paid insurance on his home at Fort Thomas, Ky., will be presented tonight to Sergeant Samuel Woodfill, named by General Pershing as the outstanding American hero of the World War, at the Palace Theatre.

The presentation will be made by Judge Phillip McCook and will be a surprise to Woodfill who was brought here ostensibly to participate in Armistice Day celebrations.

Woodfill, who recently obtained a leave of absence from the army to work as a carpenter for the purpose of raising money to pay off the mortgage on his home, will be guest of the theatre in company with General Bullard, Major General John O'Ryan, Rear-Admiral Clemson, Father Francis Duffy, Senator J. Henry Walters, Mrs. Oliver Harriman and Julia Arthur. General Pershing also will be present.

Heads Freshmen

ESTHER GILMAN

Miss Esther Gilman, of Gardner, the girl who left her position to go to college because she believed it necessary for a broader outlook on life is now a student at the College of Secretarial Science of Boston University. Miss Gilman was elected president of the freshmen class out of more than 200 girls

CHILD CAUSES MAN'S ARREST FOR BIGAMY

The insistent inquiries which a seven-year-old girl voiced about her "Mamma Grace" resulted shortly before midnight in the arrest of Henry A. Farnsworth, thirty-eight years old, of No. 27 Knight street, Readville, on a charge of bigamy.

Farnsworth married Mary L. Malensant, twenty-two years old, of No. 2236 Washington street, Roxbury, last July, and took her to live in his Readville home with his daughter Gladys, aged seven, who was born to a former wife now dead.

Gladys perturbed her new stepmother by constantly asking for "Mamma Grace," who, she insisted, had taken care of her for more than a year. Mrs. Farnsworth finally went to the police station in Hyde Park and asked advice from the officers.

Farnsworth was called into the station and questioned. He readily admitted that he had married Grace Taylor of Somerville in May, 1921, and that he had never obtained a divorce. He was promptly arrested.

PROMISED LIGHT FINE BY LAWYER, GOT JAIL TERM

How a man arrested for making liquor was advised by his attorney to plead guilty because he could not possibly receive any more than a fine of $150, was told to Judge Morton in the Federal Court by Attorney John Jackson Walsh. As a result of Attorney Walsh's statements, a re-hearing was granted Dominick Puzone of Randolph, who was recently sentenced to three months in jail.

Attorney Walsh said Puzone was arrested with another man. Their lawyer, he said, told Puzone to plead guilty and take all the blame, as he would be "let off" with a light fine. For this advice he paid the lawyer $150, he said.

Judge Morton agreed that another hearing was in order.

2-CENT GAS' INVENTOR TO RETURN $42,000

Lincoln, N. Y., Nov. 11.—Louis Enright, 74 years old, inventor of "two-cent gas," was given his choice of serving at Sing Sing or returning $42,000. He promised restitution

Boy and Sister, Aged 17 and 16, Leading Life of Vagabonds

After a vagabond life of more than a week, Bernard and Eva Porter, brother and sister, whose ages are seventeen and sixteen years, respectively, were found disconsolate on Boston Common and taken to police headquarters, awaiting the arrival of authorities who will take them back to their home in Florence. They lost their jobs in a Northampton silk mill, they said, and started out to see the world, begging food on the way and sleeping in barns and sheds. Bernard twice tried to slip away without his sister, as he thought she should stay at home, but he never succeeded in eluding her. Both were suffering from hunger when the police found them

Autoist Fined $100

Fall River, Nov. 11.—Daniel J. Shea was fined $100 in District Court for speeding and leaving the scene of an accident without making himself known.

CHILEAN HOMES ARE WRECKED BY 'QUAKE

Santiago, Chile, Nov. 11.—Severe earthshocks were felt in various parts of Chile shortly before midnight and again in the early hours of today

From various points in central Chile came reports of houses falling and other damage. A report from Antogagasta, north of Valparaiso, said that a tidal wave smashed small vessels and swept over the homes of fishermen and workers.

So far no loss of life has been reported, but communication lines from many points are out of order.

Armistice Day Service

A special Armistice Day service will be held in the Concord Trinitarian Congregational Church, Sunday morning, at 10:45 o'clock. Members of the James J. Mansfield Post, No. 158, American Legion, of the town, will be guests of honor.

Files Love Suit

GIRL CLAIMS TO HAVE 40 LOVE NOTES

New York, Nov. 11—Miss Edna Boulaine's attorney, Richard P. Campbell, says that his client has "wonderful love letters" to introduce when her $100,000 suit against Jules Rueff, Fifth avenue jeweler for breach of promise, comes to trial.

There are forty of these letters purporting to be from the jeweler to the fair complainant. In several of them, the lawyer asserts, checks were enclosed, along with scores of kisses.

Rueff is alleged to have warned Miss Boulaine, who was a clothing model at the time, to beware of the attentions of clothing buyers.

Miss Boulaine was also on the stage for five years. Her allegations are denied by the jeweler

BRIDEGROOM REFUSES TO GIVE UP HIS HEIRESS BRIDE

Colby Team Strikes Over Liquor 'Insult'

ASKED TO STAY 'DRY' ON TRIP

Players Accused by Coach of Drinking; President's Appeal Saves Game

Waterville, Me., Nov. 11.—All but four members of the Colby College football squad went on strike just as they were due to leave for New York to play the Fordham College eleven, declaring that Coach "Win" Snow had humiliated them by demanding that they promise to refrain from drinking liquor during the trip.

The Fordham game was cancelled, but later, as a result of frantic conciliatory efforts by President Roberts, the players agreed to play, and the cancellation was hastily called off. The team then left for New York.

STUDENTS IN STAMPEDE.

Coach Snow did not go with them, however. He left Waterville for Portland as soon as the game was called off, and did not return when it was later agreed to play.

News of the players' strike spread rapidly, and college work was at a standstill. Wildly excited students surged back and forth across the campus, forgetting their classes entirely.

A group of cooler heads among the students prevented a serious break by organizing a committee, headed by "Heinie" Burckel, tackle on the team, and calling on President Roberts.

They explained that the players had struck, not because they intended to drink, but because they felt Coach Snow had insulted them by demanding that they promise not to.

ACCUSED BY COACH.

The strike came because of the stand taken by two of the players, Captain William Brown, guard, and Crafty Bernard, tackle. They refused to give Coach Snow a promise not to drink, and were supported by all but four of the team.

Coach Snow, on the other hand, declares that it was absolutely necessary for him to demand the total abstinence pledge, as the players had not refrained from liquor on other out-of-town trips.

Wife Weeps as Actor Is Divorced

Roberta Arnold, from whom Herbert Rawlinson, film star recently obtained a decree of divorce, broke down and wept when the decree was announced, in a Los Angeles court. Miss Arnold, despite the divorce suit, declares that she does not believe her former husband guilty of the charges alleged by Dorothy Clark, formerly of Brookline, Mass., whose mother has brought suit against Rawlinson.

'TIGER'S WELCOME IN DOUBT

Higginson Regrets Curley's Action in Refusing Official Greeting

Francis L. Higginson, Jr., who found himself in Mayor Curley's black books when he asked His Honor to contribute $5 towards defraying the expenses of an entertainment for M. Georges Clemenceau, "Tiger of France," today issued a complete synopsis of the entire affair.

This synopsis reveals that Mayor Curley was not the only local dignitary who was asked to contribute to the entertainment fund.

MAIL LISTS RESHUFFLED.

Similar letters, Mr. Higginson says, were accidentally sent to M. Flanand, the French consul to Admiral Wilky, to General C. R. Edwards and to Governor Cox. And it all happened, says Mr. Higginson, because somebody's stenographer shuffled the mailing lists.

Mr. Higginson said that Celone House asked him to serve as chairman of the reception committee, and that Mayor Curley asked M. Clemenceau to be the guest of the city. M. Clemenceau at first accepted this invitation and, then asked that it be cancelled, as he desired no formal ceremonies on the occasion of his visit.

The only public celebration that is planned is a parade on the afternoon of M. Clemenceau's arrival in Boston. Mayor Curley was to have ridden in this parade, but after receiving the letter from Mr. Higginson he declared the city would take no part in the affair.

ADMITS MISTAKE.

The latest negotiations between the two consisted in the sending of a letter from Mr. Higgins n to the Mayor, announcing that a mistake had been made and requesting an appointment at 11 o'clock yesterday; the making of this appointment by the Mayor's secretary, and the subsequent breaking of it by the Mayor, who wrote that he had withdrawn from the affair and that an appointment would be productive of nothing.

"I greatly regret the mayor's determination not to participate in this welcome," said Mr. Higginson. "What the effect of the mayor's decision will be upon M. Clemenceau's proposed visit to Boston, I do not know."

Mayor Curley refused to be perturbed at the affair. He contented himself by remarking that the city will save from $5,000 to $7,000 by not being obliged to welcome the famous Frenchman officially.

Ignored Father In Will

MRS. E. V. WESTERN
JULIAN VOSE

Miss Frances H Vose of Brookline left her niece, Mrs. Edna V Weston $6,000 in the will which is being contested in Dedham Court by three of testator's brothers, who were cut off without a cent. The estate involves about $300,000. Four wills were drawn before Miss Vose finally decided on the one which is now being contested. She failed to leave any of her fortune to her brother, Julian Vose, of Brookline.

KIDNAPERS FOUGHT BY WIFE

Dorchester Girl, Seeking Divorce, Tells of Battle With Seven Men

Mrs. Marion G. Goddard of Dorchester, who claims to have been given a $1,000 check by Attorney Daniel H. Coakley for dropping legal action against a Boston man, described in the Brockton Divorce Court how seven men, said to be employed by her husband, kidnaped her son in the Summer of 1919.

This kidnapping, she said, took place while she was staying with the child in Greenbush. The seven men drove up in an auto, she said, and took the boy away forcibly.

Although she struggled until she was exhausted, she continued, and even got into the machine in an effort to rescue her boy, she was finally overpowered and thrown out, while the auto sped away. She charges cruel and abusive treatment in her suit.

WEDDED AT 16.

William Goddard of Brockton, the husband, gave a different version of the affair. He admitted that "two or three men went to Greenbush and picked up the boy." He professed to know nothing of any disturbance.

Mrs. Goddard said that she was sixteen years old at the time of her marriage, in 1912, while Goddard was at that time thirty-eight. She added that she had spent practically all of her life before then in a convent.

LOVE NOTES SHOWN.

Goddard denied inserting an advertisement in a matrimonial paper, although a copy of such an advertisement, bearing the signature "W. W. Goddard," was offered as evidence.

A letter from "Ida" and another letter, said to have been written by Goddard to "Ida," were introduced during the trial. "Ida's" letter began, "My Dear Billie," and the other one started, "Sweet Little Girl Ida."

MRS. MARION G. GODDARD

Dorchester wife suing for divorce, under grill of husband's counsel, said she retained Attorney Daniel H. Coakley to rid herself of an offensive admirer. She testified she was surprised to receive a $1,000 check and that later she heard Coakley had retained $4,000 of the settlement amount.

ISENBECK TELLS OF TORNADO WOOING

15-Minute Husband Says Affair With Beverly Girl "Of Different Nature"

Even Cupid has financial worries once in a while. No matter how blithely he romances, there surely comes a day when he realizes that roses for his love and angel cake for dinner cost hard, unromantic money.

Ernest Gustaf Isenbeck, Jr., handsome centre of a love entanglement involving Josephine Astel, Cleveland heiress, and Nellie May Leck, Beverly working girl, is trying to think of a way of earning a living for himself and his bride.

Notwithstanding the fact that his own family and the irate family of the young bride have determined to have the "whirlwind," marriage annulled, young Isenbeck is firm in his resolve to "stay married."

I WORKED TOO FAST.

Languidly puffing his father's monogramed cigarettes, while he lolled comfortably in an armchair beside the fireplace in the luxurious home of the Isenbecks in Peabody, the youth averred:

"I've made history too fast. I'm afraid I'm ruined forever from a business standpoint. In spite of all that is said about this being the day of quick-working people, I've gone too fast, and it will be hard to convince an employer that I am a serious married man."

E. G. Isenbeck.

The handsome young bridegroom, who was separated from his bride fifteen minutes after their runaway wedding in the Little Church Around the Corner, refuses to consider the danger of losing his wife permanently.

SURE OF HIS BRIDE.

"The poor child is frightened to death because of all this disagreeable mess that has come out about the girl in Beverley," said he gloomily, speaking of his wife.

"Her father has tried to convince her that I am a dishonorable wretch. I'm sure he can never make her forget her love for me. I can win her back just as I won her in New York, if they will only give me a chance. I don't care how many of her relatives and mine decide we should not be married, I shall never give her up until she tells me with her own lips that she no longer wants me."

"I went to New York to see her, and I had been there about fifteen minutes when I realized that seeing her wouldn't be enough for me.

REPUDIATES MISS LECK.

"I made up my mind to win her if I could. Her parents seemed to approve and we were all friendly until after we came back from the church and broke the news to them.

"I thought their objection was merely to my youth. Then this wretched story about Miss Leck came out, and trouble really started for me."

According to Isenbeck, he never intended to marry Miss Leck. "That was an affair of an entirely different nature. Of course I regret it with all my heart, because it has brought such sorrow to my family and the girl I love. But it all happened before I knew Josephine, and it seems wicked that it should mar her life now," said young Isenbeck.

Young Isenbeck's family are staunch in their loyalty to him. Mrs. Maude Isenbeck who bailed out the lad when he was arrested on a serious charge made by Miss Leck, declared that her son was "a hundred times better than all boys who have any life and vigor, only he has been found out."

MISS ALICE IS "INSULTED BY HOME TOWN"

Muskogee, Okla., Nov. 11.—Miss Alice Robertson, the only woman in Congress, who was defeated for re-election Tuesday by the man she unseated in the Republican landslide of 1920, says she has "been insulted by the citizenship of the city for which I long have fought and made sacrifices," and that when she leaves Congress next March she will come back home to Muskogee just to get her Summer clothes.

Miss Robertson said she felt that she had not been treated fairly by the citizens of her home town, who rolled up a heavy majority against her Tuesday.

"It was purely a business proposition of sending me back to Congress," she said. "I didn't want to run two years ago and it was only after much urging that I consented, but now I'm through.

"For thirty-seven years I've lived in Muskogee and was born within ten miles of the city, and I have always fought for the good of Muskogee, just as I did while I was in Congress. If I had it to do over again, I'd do the same things I have done in Congress and vote just exactly as I did.

"I owe Muskogee nothing."

Sawokla farm, bordering the city which Miss Robertson has owned since 1908, probably will be placed on the market soon as the last bit of property listed in her name here, she said.

EVERETT'S "FIGHTING MAYOR" RUNS AGAIN

Ex-Mayor John J. Mullen has stepped to the centre of Everett's political stage and announced that he is again candidate for the office that earned him great notoriety. "The Fighting Mayor" is planning a busy campaign and will begin at once a speaking tour of every ward. Five other candidates will oppose him in the city primaries November 21.

Clarence R. Edwards, who have accepted an invitation to attend the Fourth Annual Victory Ball of Roxbury Post No. 44, American Legion, November 13.

A loving cup is to be presented to General Edwards and a bas ket of flowers to Mrs. Edwards. A parade from Blanchard and Wash ington streets, Roxbury, will proceed to Dudley street. Many prominent city officials, among them Mayor Curley, will appear in the line of march.

General Edwards will make a brief address from the balcony of the Norfolk House.

SOUTH BOSTON BOYS HAD STOLEN BICYCLES

The operation of a gang of alleged bicycle thieves were interrupted when Patrolman Thomas E. Casey of the City Point station discovered several bicycles, stolen in Brockton and Newton over three months ago, in the possession of four South Boston youths. The boys were summoned to appear in court Saturday. They were Albert and Arthur Spring of No. 222 East Eighth street, four teen and sixteen years old, respectively; John Lanigan, fifteen, of No. 5 Howe Park, and William Doherty, fifteen, of No. 513 East Eighth street.

BANK SUING FOR STOLEN $150,000

Charging that Humphrey Lane, alleged proprietor of a fake poolroom, received $129,000 of the money which Paul Downey, youthful bank clerk, is charged with stealing from the Federal Trust Company, suit has been instituted against Lane for $150,000 by the bank officials.

Lane, who resides at No. 20 Queensbury street, is at present on bail. Another suit is pending against Lane and his colleague, Robert E Finn.

The Lane-Finn poolroom was operated in Park square and it is here that police allege Downey lost his money. The Suffolk Grand Jury may make a report on the Downey case today.

LOVE BLASTED, GIRL DIES BY SHOOTING

Detroit, Nov. 11.—Olive Boullier, seventeen, shot herself through the heart with her father's revolver because he opposed her infatuation for a married man. She died instantly.

'GIGGLE GIRLS' LAUGH WAY INTO JAIL

Leominster, Nov. 11.—Three "Giggle Girls," who have been appearing all week in a musical revue of that name in Music Hall Theatre, giggled so long and loudly in their house that a squad of police was sent to discover the cause of the merriment.

When the officers arrived at the hour of 2.30 in the morning, they found the girls seated in the room in company with Albert Frantz, twenty-three years old, of Boston. All were in very informal evening dress.

The quartet were taken to the police station, where the girls registered as Blanche and Marjorie Williams, sisters, and Josephine Pendridge. Brought before Judge Freeman, they said they did not know where their homes were, as they have been "knocking about the world" since their early teens.

Judge Freeman, unaffected by the giggly atmosphere, took all cause for giggling away from the girls by sentencing them to the Sharborn Reformatory. Frank was let down with a $30 fine.

San Francisco, Nov. 10.—An accidental bullet wound in the right foot resulted in the death of Robert Coulman, 15, schoolboy.

GIRL'S STORY 'FAKE'; MAN IS FREED

Barney Phillips, twenty four years old of No 70 Garfield street, Revere was acquitted of a serious complaint made against him by Sophie Benjamin, twenty four years old, of No. 40 Centennial street, by Judge Hogan of the Chelsea Court.

Barney is an iceman. On October 14 Miss Benjamin said he visited her home with ice, seized her and kissed her. She testified that she struggled, biting and pulling his hair and that she finally broke away and ran into a neighbor's apartment, where she fainted. Mrs. F. Harris, her neighbor, corroborated her story.

Phillips offered a perfect alibi to his whereabouts on the day in question, saying that he was in Boston during the hour that the attack was supposed to have taken place. Two witnesses substantiated his story.

In finding Phillips not guilty, the court said: "The plaintiff looks fully capable of taking care of herself. There is little or no evidence to show me that your story isn't absolutely false. The defendant is discharged."

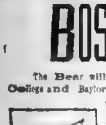
FUR WILL FLY IN BIG FOOTBALL CLASH AT BRAVES FIELD

BAYLOR NO CINCH FOR BOSTON COLLEGE

The Bear will growl this afternoon at the Eagle when Boston College and Baylor meet at Braves Field. The Eagle will screech, if eagles do such things, and, beginning at two o'clock, there will be such a mixture of fur and feathers as was never seen since Noah tucked the various winged and bisuite creatures away in his little ark.



Baylor is the strongest team that has ever represented the Southwest. It is made up of eleven men who have played against Boston College, and most of whom have had three or four years' experience on the gridiron. The bare-legged Bears have been preparing for a year for today's battle, and are determined to wipe out the defeat handed them in Texas by Cavanaugh's men last Fall.

From Texas to Boston is a long way to come for victory, and a doubly long distance to travel for defeat. The Baylor team is thinking of the shortest route, and full of confidence, they will enter the game this afternoon with but one thought in their minds—victory.

The Texans play a style of football much different than that usually seen in the East. Very few teams in the section of the country depend on freak plays to conquer their opponents. Once in a great while, a game will be won by a freak play, but this happens so infrequently that it attracts attention

Baylor's Favorite Play Is Hidden Ball Trick

Baylor, on the other hand, would attract attention if it depended on what may be called, for lack of a better name, normal football. A favorite play of the Bears is the so-called hidden ball play. The quarterback tucks the ball behind the bent knee of one of the guards, and while the backs dash around the ends, one of them apparently carrying the ball, the tackle steps out, grabs the pigskin, and races past the bewildered opponents for a touchdown.

This particular play has been responsible for seven touchdowns in games played this year. It was this play that scored the only touchdown against Boston College, and succeeded, even though Cavanaugh's men knew that it would be attempted today. Perhaps, too, the Eagle will be ready for it.

Bradshaw, Bear Quarter Player, a Man to Watch

Wesley Bradshaw, quarterback of the Baylor Bears, will be a man to watch. He is the greatest running back in the Southwest. He is a heavy chap for forwards, and has displayed remarkable skill in directing his team. When carrying the ball, he is as elusive as a will-o-the-wisp, and as hard to hold as a handful of greased eels.

Running back punts is Bradshaw's favorite dish. Just to show he can do it, he occasionally runs back kickoffs for touchdowns. He is the most dangerous man in the Baylor backfield, and has been the cause of lots of special training for the B. C. players.

Tanner, Strickland and Pittman, who complete the Baylor backfield, are exceptionally fast men. Most of Baylor's gains have been made by these men who excel in end runs. Averaging 160 pounds, they are not very good line plungers, and it is not likely that they will make any attempts to advance the ball by direct line play.

Weathers, Right Guard, Formidable Looking Mass

"Cop" Weathers, who plays right guard for Baylor, is a formidable looking man. He is rated by the Texans as being just a little bit stronger than the rock of Gibraltar. He is the big obstacle to opposing backs, and if Locke, Ward and Cronin will not hit him too often.

Bullock and Will amson, the two tackles, are also big heavy men, both weighing 216 pounds. In fact, the whole Baylor line is heavy, and outweighs the Eagle line by a few pounds.

As has been said, Cavanaugh's plays have been kept secret. His defense against Baylor looks very good, and the Bears will perhaps wonder, before the afternoon is over, just why they cannot gain as much ground as they usually have been able to on punts.

There is likely to be lots of punting done, at least by Boston College. "Chuck" Darling is in perfect shape for the game, and will have a few surprises for the Bears in the matter of kicking.

Crimson and Tigers Meet Four Times

In four distinct contests will Harvard meet opposition today. In all, Princeton will be an opponent. Yale will take part in one.

The Harvard-Princeton football game will attract the crowd. The Harvard-Princeton freshman gridiron battle and the Harvard Princeton soccer game will be played, and the Harvard-Yale-Princeton cross-country run will take place.

A close contest is expected in all, but the favorites are in the varsity football Harvard, freshman football, Harvard; soccer Princeton; cross-country, Princeton or Yale, with Harvard a poor third.

Framingham High, with a clean slate and eight victories for the season, plays Norwood High on the Norwood Civic Field in the best scholastic football game staged in Norfolk County this year.

Not since the contest with B. C. High has the Norwood eleven been forced. They can also show a clean record for the season. Framingham has made a total of 209 points against their opponents' 7.

ST. WILLIAM'S TO PLAY ROAMERS

Fans, who witnessed the game played at Ronan Park, two weeks ago between the St. William's Catholic Club of Dorchester and the Roamers, also of Dorchester, will not fail to be present tomorrow afternoon at the Savin Hill playground when these two teams meet in a return game. The previous game was one of the best seen in the Dorchester section this season. It ended in a scoreless tie, and the fans requested a return engagement.

The Saints will have a strong team in the field tomorrow, and Manager Connolly is confident of victory.

Both teams have rehearsed many new plays the past week, and the fans who trek over to the Beach playground will see a splendid article of football.

LEXINGTON WINS IN SCHOOL GOLF MATCH

The Lexington High School golf team played its first interscholastic match and defeated Melrose 7 and 4, on the Bellevue Golf Club course. It was a four ball match, and John Bullock, captain of the Lexington team, and his brother, James Bullock, who is assistant manager, made up the winning couple.

Franklin Collier, Jr., and Webb Eldridge were on the Melrose High team.

A return match will be played in North Lexington, Monday afternoon.

ST. MARY MIDGETS PLAY INDIAN MIDGETS

The St. Mary Midgets eleven of East Boston will play the Indian Midgets eleven, also of East Boston, tomorrow afternoon at World War Memorial Park at 2:30 p. m.

The St. Mary's have a clean record for the past two years, and they have played forty games in the last two years and won all but six, which ended in tie scores.

FIGHT RESULTS.

WAITING FOR SPRING

By NICK FLATLEY

BOSTON'S biggest thrill arrived today on the breast of the brisk November breezes. Never did the Crimson-Tiger game hold out greater possibilities. A regular Harvard team, perfectly schooled, keen to prosper by the enemy's slips, in splendid condition, crashed into a typical Nassau outfit—an uncertain team, brilliant, flashy, and utterly game, with the chronic Princeton aptitude to do the unexpected and surge to glorious heights.

These Tigers, by sheer brilliance and desperation, torpedoed Chicago, previously considered one of the greatest teams ever developed in the West. And they did it after assimilating a licking that should have sprinkled their mangled corpses along the cleat-torn turf.

Harvard, not yet put to the big test, has smoothly steam-rollered all opposition, with the almost smug precision that has become a Harvard habit.

The shock of such a classic collision would fill a Stadium as big as Greenland. The team that got the breaks was likely to win. It was a cinch, anyhow, that plenty of gridiron fireworks, lacking to date this season, would be touched off, shortly after the well known whistle shrilled on the Cambridge air.

NEW FOOTBALL RULES

A HOLE in the hip pocket means loss of ball

A ticket that blows into the Charles River cannot be called a grounded pass.

Space charging shall be considered offensive, especially by the bosses of the boys in the press attic.

Changing the flask from one pocket to another is an illegal shift, but O. K. if you get away with it.

In most cases, puffs over the ears come under the classification of fake formations.

Tonight's crowd was the greatest and most orderly I've ever seen. Also the latest. Nobody kicked, though, there wasn't room. I got a lot of bawlings out for tiens and stalls, but that don't faze me. We're like the tortoise, slow, but sure. If the luck is with us—Elevated Official.

THE STUDENT'S DIARY.

MONDAY—Got my tickets for the game. Offered ten bucks for them, but what a chance. I wouldn't miss that game for all the money in the mint.

Tuesday—Invited Her to go with me, and boys, she was a riot. Glad? I'll say she was. Offered fifteen bucks today, but I wouldn't toss that little girl for a million.

Wednesday—Bird of an evening with her. She let me hold her hand, and fixed my tie, and—well, you know what a petting party is. I guess I didn't know a thing when I gave that guy the air when he tried to get those tickets for twenty bucks.

Thursday—Tea this afternoon with her. I'm the fair-haired youth. We're going to have a free dinner at her house after the game, and then woo Terpsichore, as we say in class. If that isn't worth the twenty-five bucks that bird tried to give me, you tell me what is.

Friday—Took her out to watch Princeton practice. Then we had lunch. Pretty soft for little Cuthbert. Got a call from that bird, saying he was coming over to see me. All he'll get is the air.

Saturday—Got every play over the radio, and didn't have to frisk either. And thirty-five bucks will buy that new benny. Ain't women unreasonable?

STADIUM NOTES

CINCH to become acquainted with those peaches who drive to the game. Step in front of the car and get a knockdown.

Nobody was superstitious enough to turn back because the gate was numbered thirteen.

The Yale experts were scouting the Crimson, while all the other collegians were scouting drinks.

WANDERERS IN PEABODY CLASH

The Neponset Wanderers will clash with the Peabody Town Team at Peabody Sunday.

The Wanderers' cripples, Locke, Woods, Hurley, Donahue and Devine, are expected back in the game, and the line will be considerably strengthened with their return.

Blair, an Ashmont boy, is playing a wonderful game for Neponset, and is one of the best ends developed by the Wanderers since the days of Jerry Larkin.

Wendell Moulton, old Mechanic Arts star, is playing his usual heady game at quarter.

A large following will go to Peabody from all parts of Dorchester to see the game, which is expected to be one of the best of the season.

JACK DAVIS WINS B. U. TOURNAMENT

Jack Davis, a College of Business Administration senior, won the All-Boston University tennis tournament, John Backman of the Law School, was the runner-up.

Davis, who has been a member of the Boston University varsity tennis team for the past three years, has an extremely good record. Two years ago in Maine he defeated Fisher, the Maine State champion, in straight sets. He had an unbroken string of victories to his credit last year.

Backman, who closely contested Davis' play, is an able player. He is fast on his feet and his returns, though not so accurate as his opponent. With more practice, however, he will develop into one of the best players Boston University has had.

Yale Subs Tackle Maryland; Stars at Stadium

New Haven, Ct., Nov. 11.—The big Yale team had a breathing spell today, the first in quite a stretch, and Coach Ted Jones sent in his subs against the Maryland eleven. All the regulars were shipped to Cambridge to get a line on the Harvard and Princeton elevens, which are to make life merry for the Elis in the next two weeks. Jones expected to get a real line on his substitute material in today's contest.

STRANGLER DEFEATS FARMER PROFESSOR

Strangler Ed Lewis, world's heavyweight wrestling champion, retained his title at Mechanics Building when he defeated "Toots" Mondt, cowboy and one of the faculty of Colorado Agricultural College. Although the champion was tossed for the first fall after 30 minutes of very fast and artistic grappling, he came back and made it tough on the youth from Colorado.

In the second encounter of the best two falls out of three, Lewis got in "Dutch" when the farmer-instructor secured a wicked wrist lock after about thirty-two minutes of grappling. This enraged the champion. He straight-armed "Toots," who quickly let go and Promoter George V. Touhey, who was the third man in the ring, stopped the bout on what he called illegal wrestling tactics by the title-holder. This he did to give Mondt a chance to recover from the sudden blow dealt by Lewis.

However, great excitement reigned for at least five minutes, when order was restored. Promoter Touhey announced that the Colorado bone-crusher resigned the fall to Lewis. He thought he could obtain another of his famous holds on the champion, who seemed large and bulky for a title match.

When Lewis entered the ring first for the third and final encounter he was greeted with an outburst of booing by a group of fans. Lewis failed to be disturbed, however, and went about his business of conquering the cowboy champion from Colorado.

Lewis gathered in the honors after two minutes and five seconds of grappling, when he tossed his grappler from the coast with one of his famous head locks, which took whatever chance "Toots" had to topple the famous "Strangler."

The first fall went to Mondt, when he secured a strong far arm scissors and wrist lock.

Woburn Beats Melrose

Woburn defeated Melrose, 5 to 3, in their postponed Greater Boston Interscholastic Girls' Field Hockey League game.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 11.—The Brown University football eleven was hoping for an easy time with the Bates eleven at Andrews Field this afternoon for next week comes the Harvard game and the week following the Dartmouth contest and the Bruins wish to be in the best of shape for those two clashes.

Coach Robinson planned to start his first string combination and then shoot in substitutes once a comfortable lead had been established. The Bates eleven, however, sent the Massachusetts Aggies to their first defeat of the season last week, and expected to force Brown to the limit throughout the contest.

MALDEN HAS BIG GAME WITH SOMERVILLE

By FRED C. LANE.

Somerville High and Malden High elevens furnish real entertainment for scholastic fans on Dolboy Field, Somerville. Although the half way mark has been passed, no team of the Suburban League championship.

The game should decide what team can be looked upon as a probable winner. Malden is fighting desperately to hold a tie with Medford Somerville is in third place, but only a point behind Malden and Medford.

Will Be As Important As Everett-Malden Game

This will be as important as the Everett-Malden contest. The refusal of the Suburban League board to uphold the protest of Coach McDonald has caused him to work harder than ever with his squad.

Two players who will have the attention of the fans are Barubec, left end, of Malden and Mattern at Somerville. They are looked upon by the critics as all scholastic material.

This is Mattern's first year. This lad comes from New York State well recommended. Barabee has made good overnight, playing for the Malden team. These stars will oppose each other.

Medford Will Play a Waiting Game With Rindge

Medford High will play a waiting game against Rindge Tech on the Fulton street grounds. Coach Jim Mansfield's team has battled its way to the front rank in big league fashion.

Nothing but a victory will satisfy Mansfield, who is in the driver's seat with little chance to lose the position except through an unlooked for slump. The Medford boys have the championship fever, which should help them beat the Rindge aggregation by three touchdowns.

The largest crowd to ever witness a football game in Danvers is expected when St. John's Prep of Brooklyn plays St. John's Prep of Danvers in the first intersectional contest staged in the town. The visitors are heavy. The Danvers schoolboys will be outweighed, but expect to win.

Danvers' Coach Hopes for a Clean Slate

Coach "Jiggs" Donahue of the Danvers school is out to go through the season without a defeat. A victory over the New Yorkers will make his eleven a favorite when they play St. James High of Haverhill on Thanksgiving.

The reconstructed Boston College High team plays St. James High of Haverhill. The Boston High school enters the fray with their strongest lineup. It is the first time this season that Coach Bill Dempsey has all his best players in action.

The St James team have proved able performers on the gridiron. They have won every game played. B C High has not been so fortunate, but that may be because of many injuries.

HARVARD ELEVEN FAVORITE TO DEFEAT PRINCETON

BIG STADIUM JAMMED FOR GRID CLASSIC

So the thousands, who set out for the Stadium in surface cars, subway trains, in automobiles and on foot, chattered and shouted in high excitement and formed the increasing mob scene that only the gathering of a big game throng presents.

Special trains brought wild-eyed Princeton supporters, stuffed with assurance that finally the Tiger would tear down Johnny Harvard and make a meal of him right in his own Stadium, which is something the Tiger has failed to do so far Two years ago the Tiger fought desperately, but the best he could do was a 14 14 draw

BLAMES PRINCETON HEAD.

The dropping of Princeton next year from the Harvard schedule was laid directly at the door of President John Greer Hibben of Princeton, by Lothrop Withington, Harvard '11, speaking at the annual get-together pre game dinner of Princeton at the Hotel Brunswick.

Details of police were on duty in the corridors and lobby of the hotel. When President Hibben rose to speak he ignored his set address but answered directly Mr. Whitting ton's challenge. The Princeton president refused to take the blame for the cancellation of the Princeton Harvard set-to and made an earnest plea for it to be continued.

RIDICULES IDEA.

Mr. Withington ridiculed the idea that the game might be dropped in the future because of the dirty play of the Princeton men. Taking up the question of why Harvard does not award letters to players in the Princeton game, he said that Harvard did not realize that the feelings of Princeton were being hurt on this account. "If," he added "the Harvard Princeton game is continued, as it has been played in the past few years, I do not see why such letterse should not be given

CRIMSON FAVORITE.

The wagers favor the Crimson team. Odds ranging from 10 to 9, to 10 to 6 were the quotations this morning, but whether because Harvard backers feel confident of victory, or because in numbers and coin they outmatch Tiger adherents is a question. The majority of close students of the game look for a fairly even battle with victory coming to the team most favored by fortune.

Both teams approach the game with records unmarked by defeat yet each has been forced to the very limit to maintain clean slates. Harvard, in all its games, has been able to gain an early lead, but has had to fight desperately to maintain its scoring advantage. Princeton twice has trailed its opponents, only to come brilliantly to victories in each instance.

But, whereas Harvard will offer its entire first string lineup, the Tigers were expected to rely upon a substitute in one position and were uncertain whether two other positions would be able to stand for very long the strenuous play they expect to encounter.

Johnny Gorman, Princeton's fine string quarterback, who was badly injured in the Chicago game, is the one Tiger regular who will not start and may not play in today's contest. He is considered brilliant if most unorthodox strategist on the Tiger squad and his presence in the line up will be sorely missed. Bill Wingate succeeds him as the team's director and he has yet to be tested in a big game, although he did play for a few minutes against Chicago

"Whoops" Snively, regular end last year, but playing a guard position this season, is the other tender member of the Tiger first combination. He will start the contest probably, and his forward passing may feature the Tiger attack, le, who was hailed as a sure honor last year and is bound it will not be this year,

So you see, each outfit has an incentive to play its hardest and best game this afternoon.

All season Princeton has been preparing for this fray. Harvard's known formations have been permanently sketched on the blackboard of the Princeton training quarters, and each player has been told what to do and when to do it

And Harvard's team has been pointed for the Tiger game. It has been Harvard's big objective. The Crimson's ablest scouts have been following the play of Princeton all season and special formations to oppose the Tiger attack have been prepared and special plays calculated to take advantage of Tiger weaknesses have been taught.

Consequently the incentive and preparation by both teams would indicate a rare football treat for those who occupy Stadium seats today.

Who will be the heroes of the clash remains to be seen. The Harvard Princeton series has been one in which one or two men by rare individual play have turned the tide of battle.

Some of These Shone in Other Years.

Of recent years Eddie Casey, Ralph Horween and Howoe Fitts of Harvard, and Don Lourie, Hank Garrity and Ralph Gilroy of Princeton, each made his thrilling contribution They are only a handful of the many who have come to fame in past Tiger Crimson engagements And all are waiting to learn what names will be added to that list of heroes as the result of today's contest.

To date neither team has disclosed a real outstanding star. Buell, the Harvard captain, through his generalship, and Cleaves, the Tiger full back, through his all-around back field ability, most closely approach the star class.

Owen of Harvard, who was All-America calibre last year, has failed thus far to shine with his old brilliance; Eastman, the Harvard tackling may feature the Tiger attack, le, who was hailed as a sure honor man last year, has yet to impress football students with his play Treat who was a leading All American choice when he played for Boston College has not shone as expected in his Princeton uniform, and the remaining regulars of both teams, although displaying real ability in one or two games, have not maintained a high average for the season

But today's play is bound to find some member or members of one or both elevens playing as one possessed, and the folks are anxiously waiting to see or learn who will rate the Sunday headlines

The monster crowd that will witness the contest began assembling in Boston early this week, and long before noon hundreds of their number started to cross and recross the Charles River to find their coveted seats in the Brighton horseshoe.

Harvard Glee Club Entertains the Grid Stars

The Harvard Glee Club sent four members, including the well known Charley Whidden, out to the Oakley Country Club and as the Harvard football squad had an enjoyable night before the game, after a very hearty dinner (6 o'clock) of roast beef and ——. The four choristers got the minds of the grid players off the game with the Tigers and then at 10 o'clock Coach Donovan, the trainer, pulled out the old tick tock and said: "Good night, boys. To bed, to bed.

Certain That Game Will Be Bitterly Fought.

That the game will be bitterly fought from start to finish is certain. Not the best of feeling exists between the two institutions. Princeton followers blame Harvard for the loss of several Tiger stars through the "Big Three" athletic investigation last year; they resent accusations emanating from Cambridge concerning the play and language of the Tiger teams of last year and two years ago, and have other issues with the sons and supporters of Fair Harvard

Harvard Expected to Win Last Year.

In turn, followers of the Crimson take very unkindly to the Tigers' ability to win or tie Harvard in the past three years. Those happenings have cost many of them hard earned cash and their team football prestige and they believe their accusations of unsportsmanlike play and language are founded on facts

Harvard expected, was very confident, in fact, of beating Princeton last year, and the plan then reported was to accomplish that and drop the Tigers from Harvard's schedule. But Princeton was not to be so treated

CAPTAIN BUELL BIG ASSET TO HARVARD

By TOM THORP.

The old Nassau outfit is going to see the Crimson with the determination to stage the sort of battle they displayed out at Stagg Field a few weeks ago. That brand of fight would make Princeton a mighty hard team to beat.

Bob Fisher had the advantage of starting the season with first-class material. In fact, most authorities believe he has the best backfield material in the country. Charley Buell is the smartest field general playing the game. He is a big asset to the Harvard team. The remainder of the backfield is composed of veterans.

A team that won't be beat, can't be beat. That is the sort of spirit that will characterize the playing of the Old Nassau eleven in Cambridge Stadium.

It has kept the Orange and Black from trailing in the dust on many occasions. Roper is the man who put fight into Princeton football, and if Princeton wins full credit for the victory will be his alone.

The first intersectional game ever staged at Saugus will be played at Starkpole Field this afternoon when the Saugus eleven meets Somersworth High. Because of the fine showing made by the Saugus eleven there is great interest in this game with the New Hampshire schoolboys.

Plans and preparations have been made to entertain the visitors from the Granite State. The team took a long drive along the North Shore this morning and feel fit for a strenuous contest this afternoon

The New Hampshire team took a severe lacing from Mt. James High in the opening game of the season, but have improved since that reverse. The Somersworth team comes to these parts with a fighting backfield It is said that the combination of Kennedy, Flanigan, Kennedy and Hodson make up a quartet hard to stop

Yale Varsity Coach and Players at Stadium Game

Yale has a rinch game today at New Haven and all the varsity players and coaches will watch the Princeton and Harvard elevens in the first of the big Three games at the Stadium.

Yale will play Princeton next Saturday, and Harvard two weeks from today.

So the Bulldog represents thes come with a double purpose, not only to size up the Tigers but also to scout the Harvard team.

Harvard cannot very well conceal anything today for it is the Harvard idea to beat the Tigers and then unload them off the schedule, but, as the biggest game of all and the only one that counts is with the Elis, the Fishermen may take a chance and accept defeat rather than concede too much to the Yale spies.

The general consensus of opinion around town is that Harvard will beat the Tigers.

Polo Grounds, New York Nov 11 —Gloomy Gil Dobie's "Big Red Terror" grid machine from the mountain fastnesses of Ithaca engaged its toughest foe of the season at the Polo Grounds this afternoon when it met Dartmouth's sturdy eleven in the third engagement of their resumed football series.

The Green eleven showed its best performance when it held Harvard to four first downs and was only licked through ill luck and doubtful officiating and it came to New York grimly determined to avenge itself for the 59 to 7 victory scored by Cornell last year

Simendinger returned to the squad yesterday for the first time since last Saturday. The crack halfback is in poor shape and he may not be used, unless he is absolutely needed.

Broussard will take Simendinger's place if "Si" does not play His work last Saturday showed that he has struck his stride. That will make the second game of football Broussard has played against the Y' directors. Last year, after both Simendinger and Glennon were forced out of the game because of injuries, Broussard was rushed in and saved the day for the Purple.

Only twice in he eight years she teams have met has the Army mule been privileged to sound a bray of victory. The other six years have seen the hardy Hoosiers from South Bend return westward in triumph. Today's meeting is the ninth.

Nat N. Dorfman on His Ante-Murder Love Notes

By Nat N. Dorfman

As you can readily see, our illicit love affair, like the bootlegger, continues to thrive. But nothing ventured, nothing gained, and we still are confident that we will be killed sooner or later. Even at that our lives hang up by a hair the color of which cannot be determined until the deed is committed.

If my wife does the killing, it will be by a brown hair our lives hinge on; if it's her husband that attends to the pleasantries, then it will be by whatever color hair he happens to have.

And now on to another set of our volcanic love letters which we trust we will seen in print before we are slaughtered by some irate readers of this newspaper.

"My Moon Maid and My Love of the Year:

"What can I say to you today that hasn't already been said by couples in letters who have been successfully murdered? We are, after all my Elephantkins in the exterrimental stage. If we are never murdered—oh, I hate to think of such a fate—these letters will have been written in vain!

"Martha has read these letters of ours in print as she swung lazily in a hammock, her favorite place when she desires to mock me, but she refuses to believe us guilty. She says we are only after the publicity, as we expect to go into the movies. What a trusting soul she is! She intends giving one of her dumbatic recitals soon, and I will be just like her to memorize these passionate epistles of ours for an encore.

"I missed your carcass terribly yesterday afternoon. In fact, I even believed I missed you. Why didn't you show up, my soul of souls? Did it take you all that time to select a fitting tombstone for the two of us? I hope you only left a small deposit, as we may have no reason to use them unless Martha or John, that's your husband's name, isn't it? Wake up to the facts in the case.

"I will expect you at the farm tonight. I hope the corn thieves try swiping some pumpkins for a change, so they don't spoil our spooning. And I trust those other married couples keep away from the crab apple tree. We don't want them murdered by mistake for us. That would be terribly disheartening.

"As ever,

"Your Lil'le Income Tax Collector.

"Note—She always called me that because I was so prompt in collecting my smackers—a vulgar term for kisses.

My Moon Maid's answer to this violent love missive follows:

"My dear Doodlebugs:

"I was reading a novel called 'Near Views of Life in Oshkosh' and was reveling in the fiery love between the chief of police and the mayor's wife, when your inspirational letter reached me by parcel post. I knew it was from you because outside of the creditors you are the only one who writes regularly, and this wasn't creditor's day.

"I am heartbroken today. Jim, that's my husband's name, and not John, said that he's a flat failure in life as a watchman. He said there was no advancement in the job, so he threatens to quit, the job, not me. Oh, that he would leave me—the money he inherited from a bootleg cousin of his who was killed in action.

"But why doesn't something happen? I'm running all out of ideas for these letters and unless the deed is committed pronto, we'll both grow stale, and three minutes won't be worth a rubia. There's no sense in continuing this affair unless we are certain of being murdered, for then and only then can we get our just deserts.

"I am praying for the end!

"Your Moon Maid."

Note by Editor—Her prayer has been answered. If any fair readers feel hurt, let us know.

ONCE OVERS

(Copyright, 1922, by International Feature Service, Inc.)

ARE YOU HEADED FOR EASY STREET?

Perhaps you have worked hard and steadily all your life; but is it not true that you have taken things easily when it came to taking any loads which might cause you worry, or many hours of harder study and harder work?

You have been taking your salary each week, and making plans for using it nearly up as you go. You have forgotten there might be an end to it.

Perhaps you have had luxuries which men with many times your income have done without indulging, yet you continue to enjoy them.

Sometimes you have thought that you would not assume the responsibilities and the burdens you know they have, for all that they will be able to accumulate.

You say, "what is the use of living, if you do not live?"

You are going to think what is to be your fate when your salary stops.

This line of thought will make you wish you had denied yourself a lot of good times, so that instead of recollections of enjoyment you might have had a nest egg stored up at forty or thereabouts.

It is better to be on Easy street at sixty than to have a good time at forty.

NEWLYWED WAILS

SOMETIMES the discordant music of married life becomes quite popular when it is aired in the divorce court.

Only a foolish woman asks her husband a lot of silly questions when he returns from the office every day; and only a very foolish man will refuse to answer them.

He who lunches last is a bachelor, particularly when he sees his former chums wheeling go-carts down the boulevard.

They say "forgive and forget," but how can a married man ever forget?

Before marriage a couple make up with a kiss, afterwards they either say, "Good morning, judge," or "Here I am again, Doc!"

Woman has heard that the way to a man's heart is through his stomach, and she sets out to cook his goose the first thing.

Medbury Says a Guy May Get Another Fellow's Steak in His Straw

By John P. Medbury

A NEW YORK scientist says that fifty or sixty years from now dining rooms and restaurants will be unknown and people will be getting their food out of the air through straws.

CAN you imagine a guy walking up and down the main street with a straw in his mouth inhaling a dinner?

THIS scientist says that the air is full of all kinds of good things to eat if we only knew where to get them. The city would have to put up signs like "This block is full of cream puffs" or "In two blocks south for chocolate eclairs."

THE only thing we could draw out of the air in the street cars and subways would be garlic and onions.

IF we wanted wine we'd have to go out in front of some brewery and puff on our straw.

WHEN you wanted to invite company to lunch all you'd have to do would be to give them a straw and show them the front door.

THE clerks and stenographers won't have to leave the office at twelve o'clock. They'll just pick up a straw and stick their heads out of the window.

THEN in five or ten minutes they can wipe their mouths and shut the window.

THIS would be a great thing for the real estate business. Everybody would be moving out into the suburbs where there was more corned beef and cabbage and potatoes in the air.

BUT then, some guys are so greedy, they wouldn't be satisfied with using a straw, they'd go after their meals with a vacuum cleaner.

Something to See

"I read today," Bartholomew said to Richard "of the wonderful progress made in aviation. You can now do anything — almost do!" But Richard was tired of wonders—he was quite matter-of-fact. "Is that so?" he answered. "Well, when you see an airman fast asleep, hanging on to a branch of a tree with one foot, I'll come and have a look!"

HIGHBROW ESSAYS

By Joy Sutherland

APPENDICITIS is the sophisticated brother of too much dinner, and hits its unsuspecting victim in the midriff with a solar plexus knockout and leaves him with nothing but a grim outlook and a fine inch scar.

Appendicitis wasn't discovered until the medical profession became so crowded that the young practitioner was forced to roll his own cigarettes, but with the discovery all the medical colleges added a wing and draw other extensions, not to mention $200 to the matriculation fee.

When the doctor needs a new tire it is just a case of gastritis or indigestion, but if he wants to replace his old flivver he yells for cold chisel, meat axe and wire pliers.

Placing you on the operating table and covering you with a white cloth, he leaves you feeling like the left-overs from a blue Monday breakfast. When he comes back with three accomplices to stand by and protect him he mounts your frame and pumps up and down like a boy trying to scare a rabbit out of a brush pile. If you grunt he grabs for a nose-bag filled with chloroform, and when you awaken he has taken one vermiform appendix, 800 berries, your temperature and appetite.

Then you go out in the world looking like the ghost of Banquo with an acute attack of the yellow jaundice and then spend the rest of your life talking about that operation to any one who will listen.

The Situation Saved

It was a melodrama, and in the prison scene a man was supposed to be shot while filing the bars of his cell in an attempt to escape. The revolver failed to explode, but the prisoner dropped as though dead. The warder whose revolver had failed him at the critical moment rose gallantly to the occasion. "Heavens!" he exclaimed in a tone of horror. "He swallowed the fuse!"

WHEN KNIGHTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER

See This Romance of Princess Mary Tudor Starring Marion Davies in Super Motion Pictures Which Are Now Showing at the Park Theatre

Princess Mary passionately refuses to marry King Louis

By Charles Major

Never!"

Preparations went on for the marriage just as if Mary had given her solemn consent. The important work of providing the trousseau began at once, and the more important matter of securing the loan from the London merchants was pushed along rapidly. The good citizens might cling affectionately to their angels, double angels, crowns and pounds sterling, but the fear in which they held the king, and a little patting of the royal hand upon the plebeian head, worked the charm, and out came the yellow gold, never to be seen again, God wot. Under the stimulus of the royal smile they were ready to shout themselves hoarse, and to eat and drink themselves red in the face in celebration of the wedding day. In short, they were ready to be tickled nearly to death for the honor of paying to a wretched old lecher a wagon-load of gold to accept, as a gracious gift, the most beautiful heart-broken girl in the world. That is, she would have been heart-broken had she not been inspired with courage. As it was, she wasted none of her energy in lamentations, but saved it all to fight with. Heavens! how she did fight! If a valiant defence ever deserved victory, it was in her case. When the queen went to her with silks and taffetas and fine cloths, to consult about the trousseau, although the theme was one which would interest almost any woman, she would have none of it, and when Catherine insisted upon her trying on a certain gown, she rolled her a blackamoor, tore the garment to pieces, and ordered her to leave the room.

Henry sent Wolsey to tell her that the 13th day of August had been fixed upon as the day of the marriage, de Longueville to act as the French king's proxy, and Wolsey was glad to come off with his life.

Matters were getting into a pretty tangle at the palace. Mary would not speak to the king, and poor Catherine was afraid to come within arm's length of her; Wolsey was glad to keep out of her way, and she flew at Buckingham with talons and beak upon first sight. As to the battle with Buckingham. It was short but decisive, and this was the way it came about: There had been a passage between the duke and Brandon, in which the latter had tried to coax the former into a duel, the only way, of course, to settle the weighty matters between them. Buckingham, however, had had a taste of Brandon's nimble sword play, and, bearing in mind Judson's fate, did not care for any more. They had met by accident, and Brandon, full of smiles and as polite as a Frenchman, greeted him.

"Doubtless my lord, having crossed swords twice with me, will do me the great honor to grant that privilege the third time, and will kindly tell me where my friend can wait upon a friend of his grace."

"There is no need for us to meet over that little affair. You had the best of it, and if I am satisfied you should be. I was really in the wrong, but I did not know the princess had invited you to her hall."

"Your lordship is pleased to evade," returned Brandon. "It is not the ball-room matter that I have to complain of; as you have rightly said, it you are satisfied, I certainly should be; but it is that your lordship, in the name of the king, instructed the keeper of Newgate prison to confine me in an underground cell, and prohibit communication with any of my friends. You so arranged it that my trial should be secret, both as to the day thereof and the event, in order that it should not be known to those who might be interested in my release. You promise the Lady Mary that you would procure my liberty, and thereby prevented her going to the king for that purpose, afterwards told her that it had all been done, as promised, and that I had escaped to New Spain. It is because of this, my Lord Buckingham, that I now denounce you as a liar, a coward and a perjured knight, and demand of you such satisfaction as one man can give to another for mortal injury. If you refuse, I will kill you as I would a cut-throat the next time I meet you."

"I care nothing for your rant, fellow, but out of consideration for the feelings which your fancied injuries have put into your heart, I tell you that I did what I could to liberate you, and received from the keeper a promise that you should be allowed to escape. After that a certain letter adressed to you was discovered and fell into the hands of the king—a matter in which I had no part. As to your confinement and non-communication with your friends, that was at his majesty's command after he had seen the letter, as he will most certainly confirm to you. I say this for my own sake, not that I care what you may say or think."

This offer of confirmation by the king made it all sound like the truth, so much will even a little truth leaven a great lie; and part of Brandon's calls came down against the mast. The whole statement surprised him, and, most of all, the intercepted letter. What letter could it have been? It was puzzling, and yet he dared not ask.

As the duke was about to walk away, Brandon stopped him: "One moment, your grace; I am willing to admit what you have said, for I am not now prepared to contradict it; but there is yet another matter we have to settle. You attacked me on horseback, and tried to murder me in order to abduct two ladies that night over in Billingsgate. That you cannot deny. I watched you follow the ladies from Bridewell to Grouche's, and saw your face when your mask fell off during the melee as plainly as I see it now. If other proof is wanting, there is that sprained knee upon which your horse fell, causing you to limp even yet. I am sure now that my lord will meet me like a man; or would he prefer that I should go to the king and tell him and the world the whole shameful story? I have concealed it heretofore, thinking it my personal right and privilege to settle with you."

Buckingham turned a shade paler as he replied: "I do not meet such as you on the field of honor, and have no fear of your slander injuring me."

He felt secure in the thought that the girls did not know who had attacked them, and could not corroborate Brandon in his accusation, or Mary, surely, never would have appealed to him for help.

I was with Brandon—at a little distance, that is—when this occurred, and after Buckingham had left, we went to find the girls in the forest. We knew they would be looking for us, although they would pretend surprise when they saw us. We soon met them, and the very leaves of the trees gave a soft, contented rustle in response to Mary's low, mellow laugh of joy.

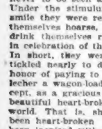
WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

By Ann Lisle

"WHEN it we top that off by hiring experts to carry out our ideas when practical and to scotch them when they're no good, we really ought to be on the map in—would you say six months, Ralph?"



"I would."

Mr. Lacy bit it off in a tone which assured me that he didn't intend to touch the steering wheel which Park had just taken into his hands.

"I've sized up young Rockhill as an all-fired snob," went on Park, glowing with interest in his subject. "He thinks having a Parkinson for a partner is a darn sight more important than it is. And he'll take stuff from me that he'd fight coming from Hoadley. Now I like the old codger. He knows the business world. I'll stand as a go-between and let Hoadley hold 10 per cent. of the stock and act in advisory capacity as Ralph thinks wise. Then the Parkinson money can be invested in hiring experts."

"That's great," I said idly.

"And the first expert I want to hire is a woman who knows women—and who's been studying the publicity game. Do you think that's a wise move, Mrs. Harrison?"

"I certainly do," I agreed. "You're stocked up with glove silk underwear and all sorts of lingerie. If you find the right market for that you ought to make a fair turnover."

"One detail is settled," said Park with a glint in his eye on which I laid no particular stress at the time. "Now I want you to help me in a real problem. Look at our Ralph. Would you think he could lay back his ears and balk in a fashion to do credit to the teaching of our friend Hoadley?"

This sounded like the regular Park—whose persiflage has always hidden just these pitfalls for gravity and for grupping a situation. But the keenness with which his eyes searched my face as he put his seemingly light question, disconcerted me. I felt that something hung on my answer—on my decision.

"Mr. Lacy might be firm. I don't think he'd be stubborn," I managed, in a tone I tr. d to make it suitably casual, half amused. " fact.

Mr. Lacy smiled with more satisfaction than my reply seemed to warrant. But Park burst out:

"Just he is stubborn—downright stubborn. I'll prove it. I need experts. I need friends. I need sound advisors in whom I have absolute confidence. Where will I get all these—except in Ralph Lacy, known to his college mates as 'Rafe the Pirate and Captain Kidd'?"

"Mr. Lacy is going to stand by—you know that." I said, groping for the right note.

"Sure he is. He has. He made me what I am to-day, and he's planning to make Yelda. He got me a plaything. He's made me want to take hold. He'll see me through. Never think I'm questioning that. But what makes me mad is that he wants to do it just as a friend, instead of going down on the books as an expert, retained in an advisory capacity. I can't persuade him to go on the salary list. He's the same old unpractical sixpence he was in college days where his friends were concerned. And I say he must. What do you say?"

It was on the tip of my tongue to cry out that of course Mr. Lacy must be retained as an expert and stand high on the salary list. But something impelled me to meet his eyes. I found them wistful, wide and almost pleading for understanding. The keenness and shrewdness were gone, so too was the intentness. There was just a look of wanting to hold fast to an ideal—of what I did not know. But to my surprise and as if I had been impelled by Ralph Lacy's eyes, I heard myself saying:

"It is Mr. Lacy's right to be allowed to stand by you—and Aunt May."

Ralph Lacy smiled. I had a queer sense of having been rewarded.

"You folks win!" cried Wayne Parkinson, Jr., getting to his feet and beginning to stride up and down the big living room at Dreamwold. "Old Ralph, the unpiratical pirate, goes on being my adviser in chief, also he adopts little Yelda. I make steady inroads on his time without giving a thing in return. It's always been that way between us and it looks now as if it always would be the same way."

"Don't talk about what you give or I give, old man!" Ralph Lacy cried in a note of emotional tension such as I'd never before heard in his voice. "Your friendship from college days on has been so generous that it has put me where I could about as readily drain the Atlantic with a sieve as pay off the accumulated debt. And I'd as readily try. Say—isn't it time to cut out business and act like a couple of guests?"

"We sure have made Mrs. Anne Harrison listen to a lot," agreed Park, again making his own quaint use of my name. "And she's going to hear a lot more tomorrow night when she attends our dinner to Aunt May. So maybe now—old man—as one who has been here before and knows all about the place, it would be a good idea for me to offer to show you the grounds or something. Personally conducted tours—this way!"

"Why, it's after six!" I cried, glancing at my watch. "We might look up our host and hostess. You'll love Pat Dalton as well as you did his wife."

"Will you listen to the things she's insinuating about two conservative young men neither of whom intended to show his overmastering love for Mrs. Dalton so plainly!" cried Park in a tone of mock-heroics which broke up our conference in a gale of laughter.

A GOOD SUIT STYLE FOR A SMALL BOY

3857. Here is a smart and trim looking suit that will not be difficult to make, and will prove comfortable. It is good for serge or twill, as well as for velvet, and wash materials. The trousers close at the sides.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes; 3, 4, 5 and 6 years. A 4-year size will require 2 yards of 44-inch material. In blue corduroy with white linen collar or brown serge, this makes a very serviceable suit.

A POPULAR STYLE

3956. The Middy is important in every girl's wardrobe. For sports wear, school and college there is no garment that quite takes its place. The model here shown is made with a hem facing that may be turned up in belt effect. The sleeve may be in wrist or elbow length. Indian Head, drill, silk or pongee are good for this style.

The pattern is cut in 5 sizes: 8, 10, 12, 14 and 16 years. A 16-year size requires 2¾ yards of 36-inch material.

A BECOMING DRESS FOR WORK OR PORCH WEAR

3688. Neatness and utility are expressed in this model. The closing is at the centre front, the lines are good and comfortable, and the style has pleasing features. One could have this in checked gingham, with vest, collar, belt and cuffs of white repp or pique. Other wash fabrics are equally desirable. For warmth, flannelette and gabardine are recommended.

The pattern is cut in 7 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. A 38-inch size requires 5 yards of 36-inch material. The width of the skirt at the foot is about 2 yards.

Logic Is Logic

If even a striped tie can make a fat man thin, as announced by Frank Alvah Parsons on scientific authority, then our friends in Sing Sing prison must be invisible. This may explain our many prison escapes.

A POPULAR MODEL WITH NEW FEATURES

3911. The coat dress has many friends. It is such a wearable garment, so easy to adjust and ever trim looking, supplying the requirements of both a home and street costume. This style is good for kasha cloth, for canton crepe and taffeta. It is attractive for slender as well as for mature figures.

The pattern is cut in seven sizes, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. A 38-inch size requires 4½ yards of 44-inch material. The width of the dress at the foot is about two yards.

Let Them Rejoice

It is some consolation for those who travel on the Erie Railroad to learn that it takes 3,000 years for light to travel to the earth from the nebula just revealed to astronomers in the telescope. They usually get to their destination on the same day they started.

CHRISTMAS DOLL SET

4196. The little doll mother may not only make dolly's clothes but also the doll, from the models supplied herewith. The body may be of drill, unbleached muslin, oilcloth or sanilas, with a stuffing of bran, kapok or cotton. Eyes of shoe buttons, nose and lips of yarn, or the features may be embroidered or painted.

Dressed as a clown, this doll will be very attractive. The suit may be of calico, cretonne or scraps of silk or satin. One or two colors of materials may be used. For the rompers cretonne or gingham is pleasing. Dolly will be so glad of the dear little pockets in her rompers, and "Pierrot," the clown, will do all sorts of tricks in his comfortable costume, if his arms and legs are fastened so as to be movable.

The pattern, comprising the doll and the garments, is cut in three sizes, small, 12 inches; medium, 16 inches; large, 20 inches in length. The doll requires for a medium size one-half yard. The rompers seven-eighths yard. The suit and hat, 1¾ yards of 27-inch material.

MACARONI RECIPES

New England housewives are requested to send in recipes for appetizing dishes made from macaroni or spaghetti. A package of macaroni will be sent each winner printed here. Address Recipe Editor, Boston American 8, Boston, Mass.

Boiled Macaroni

To cook perfectly take plenty of boiling water to a package of macaroni. Salt the water well, then boil macaroni rapidly, with the cooking utensil uncovered, until tender. After draining the macaroni in a colander it is then ready for your favorite recipe.

Spaghetti Au Gratin

Take a shallow vegetable dish, grease it well with fresh butter; place a layer of boiled spaghetti (see Recipe 1) on it, with a few pieces of butter on top, and sprinkle it well with grated Swiss or Parmesan cheese; place another layer of spaghetti, treated as above, on top of this, and so on until the dish is filled; then sprinkle the top with some fine bread crumbs and place in oven just long enough to brown. Serve hot.

Tomato Sauce

One can of tomatoes, 1 onion, 8 whole peppers, 1 carrot, little thyme, 4 cloves, parsley, 6 bay leaves, 2 teaspoonfuls sugar. When well cooked, strain, add butter, also corn starch to thicken, and season with salt and pepper to taste. Two green peppers will add greatly to the flavor of the sauce.

Correct English

1. A subscriber writes: "Kindly tell me how carton, a case for inclosing articles, is pronounced and its derivation. What word is often incorrectly confused with cartoon?

2. Improve the sentence. "She gave up the work, it being too hard for her."

3. Is it correct to say, "This knife is no good"?

4. What is amiss with the sentence, "She is a light-complected girl"?

ANSWERS.

1. Carton, often confused with "cartoon," is pronounced kar-ton. It is from the French, meaning a kind of thin pasteboard.

2. Say, "She gave up the work as too difficult."

3. Say, "This knife is worthless."

CUTICURA HEALS RASH ON BACK

Spread To Neck and Arms. Itched and Burned. Lasted 3 Months.

"My trouble began with a rash breaking out on my back. My clothing aggravated it, and it kept spreading to my neck and arms. It itched and burned so that I spent many a sleepless night. The trouble lasted about three months. I tried different remedies without success. I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample which helped me. I bought more and in three weeks was healed." (Signed) H. M. Kramer, 360 Hertel Ave., Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 24, 1922.

Cuticura Soap to cleanse and purify, Cuticura Ointment to soothe and heal and Cuticura Talcum to powder and perfume are ideal for daily toilet purposes.

Soap 25c. Ointment 25 and 50c. Talcum 25c. Sold throughout the world. Cuticura Soap shaves without mug.

Mrs. Linton Tells How Helpful Lydia E.Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is at This Period

Denver, Colorado.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for seven years and I cannot tell you the good it has done me. I used to be so poorly and old and I always kept a bottle of it in the house, for I am at that time of life when it calls for Lydia E. Pinkham's help. My husband saw your ad. in the papers and said 'You have taken everything you can think of, now I want you to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.' So I let him get it, and I soon felt better and he told me 'I want you to take about six bottles.' So I did and I keep house and do all my work and feel well and get by the day and feel fine now. I tell every one about the Vegetable Compound, for so many of my friends thought I would not get well."—Mrs. R. J. Linton, 1850 West 33d Avenue, Denver, Colorado.

After reading letters like the above, and we are constantly publishing them, why should any woman hesitate to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound if she is in need of help? It brings relief where other medicines fail.

The Mortgage Business

THE mortgage business is one of the oldest. In the days of ancient Babylon, 3,000 years before the Christian era, mortgage transactions were recorded in clay, which was burned to a brick for the purpose of preservation.

KIMONO, By JOHN PARIS

Great Exposure of How Japanese Treat Their Women

SUPPRESSED BY JAPANESE GOVERNMENT

This startling and intensely interesting story of the Cherry Blossom Kingdom, telling what the Japanese think of women, was suppressed by the Japanese government. The expose has stunned Europe and opened the eyes of the world to what has really been going on. John Paris, the author, was an English diplomat there for years.

THE CHARACTERS IN THE STORY:

THE HONORABLE GEOFFREY BARRINGTON, son of Lord Brandan, a Captain in the British Army, resigns his commission when he weds

ASAKO FUJINAMI, heiress, daughter of Japanese parents who are dead; brought up and educated in French convent schools and introduced to London society by LADY EVERINGTON, a brilliant matchmaker, who did not foresee the result of the bringing together of the two. At the reception toasts are drunk to the closer union of Britain and Japan, but both British and Japanese diplomats in the distinguished company evade the suggestion that the couple visit Japan, as appears to be their desire. Some of the reception guests frankly question the wisdom of the marriage and doubt the possibility of a happy life for the pair. Lady Everington, in her anxiety for the young Captain, who has been her special protege, intervines.

COUNT SAITO, the Japanese Ambassador, who tells her the Fujinamis belong to the nouveaux riches of Japan, but gives little information of their origin or the source of their wealth. A visit to his wife's guardians, the Muratas, a Japanese family living in Paris, and a sojourn among the cosmopolitans of Deauville, sharpen the desire to see Japan. Aboard the ship they meet

VISCOUNT KAMIMURA, returning home to wed a bride he has never seen. A stop at Nagasaki is the first sight of Japan. A part of the revelation is the Chonkina, or Geisha dance, seen by Barrington, who is shocked by the performance. He is disturbed to learn from the talk of Americans and Englishmen that marriages with Japanese women are not favorably regarded.

ASAKO was so unconscious of her relationship that she liked to 'play' at imitating native life, as something utterly peculiar and absurd. Meals in Japanese eating houses amused her immensely.

The squatting on bare floors, the exaggerated obeisance of the waiting-girls, the queer food, the clumsy use of chop-sticks, the numbness of her feet after being sat upon for half an hour, all would set her off in peals of unchecked laughter, so as to astonish her compatriots who naturally enough mistook her for one of themselves.

Once, with the aid of the girls of the hotel, she dressed herself in the garments of a Japanese lady of position with her hair dressed in the shiny black helmet-shape, and her waist encased in the broad, tight obi or sash, which after all was no more uncomfortable than a corset. Thus attired she came down to dinner one evening trotting behind her husband as a well-trained Japanese wife should do. In foreign dress she appeared petite and exotic, but on seeing her have hesitated to name the land of her birth.

It was a shock to Geoffrey to see her again in her native costume. In Europe, it had been a distinction, but here, in Japan, it was like a sudden fading into the landscape. He had never realised quite how entirely his wife was one of these people. The short stature and the shuffling gait, the tiny delicate hands, the grooved slit of the eyelids, and the oval of the face were pure Japanese.

The only incongruous elements were the white ivory skin of rich, however, is a beauty not unknown among home-reared Japanese women also, and, above all, the expression which looked out of the dancing eyes and the red mouth ripe for kisses, an expression of freedom, of happiness, and natural high spirits, which is not to be met in a land where the women are hardly free, never natural, and seldom happy. The Japanese woman's face displays the compressed look which leaves the features a mere mask, and acquires very often a furtive glance, as of a sharp-fanged animal half-tamed by fear, something weasel-like or vixenish.

Came to Dinner

Flaunting her native costume, Asako came down to dinner at the Miyako Hotel, laughing, chattering, and imitating the mincing steps of her country-women and their exaggerated politeness. Geoffrey tried to play his part in the little comedy but his good spirits were forced and gradually silence fell between them, the silence which falls on masqueraders in fancy dress, who have tried to play up to the spirit of their costume, but whose imagination flags.

Had Geoffrey been able to think a little more deeply he would have realised that this play-acting was a very visible sign of the gulf which yawned between the white and the yellow women of Japan. She was acting as a white woman might have done, ignorant of the impossibility of confusion. But Geoffrey for the first time felt his wife's exoticism, not from the romantic and charming side, but from the ugly, sinister, and—horrible word—inferior side of it. Had he married a colored woman? Was he a queer's man? A sickening vision of chonkina at Nagasaki rose before his imagination.

When dinner was over, and after Asako had received the congratulations of the other guests, she retired upstairs to put on her negligee. Geoffrey lifted her, after dinner, but Asako objected to the heavy aroma hanging about her bedroom. They therefore parted generally for this brief half hour; and afterwards they would read and talk together in their sitting-room. Like other people, they soon got into the habit of going to bed early in a country where there were no theatres playing in a comprehensible tongue, and no supper restaurants to turn night into day.

Man of Great Future

Geoffrey lit his cigar and made his way to the smoking-room. Two elderly men, merchants from Kobe, were already sitting thereover whiskies and sodas, discussing a mutual acquaintance.

"No, I don't see much of him," one of them, an American, was saying, "nobody does nowadays. But take my word, when he came out here as a young man he was one of the smartest young fellows in the East."

"Yes, I can quite believe you," said the other, a solid Scottish man with a briar pipe, "he struck me as an exceptionally well-educated man."

"He was more than that, I tell you. He was a financial genius. He was a man with a great future."

"Poor fellow!" said the other. "Well, he has only got himself to thank."

Geoffrey was not an eavesdropper by nature, but he found himself getting interested in the fate of this anonymous failure, and wondered if he was going to hear the cause of the man's downfall.

It Is Worry

"When these Japanese women get hold of a man," the American went on, "they seem to drain the brightness out of him. Why, you have only got to stroll around to the Kobe Club and look at the faces. You can tell the ones that have Japanese wives or housekeepers right away. Something seems to have gone right out of their expression."

"It's worry," said the Englishman. A fellow marries a Japanese girl, and he finds he has to keep all her lazy relatives as well, and then a crowd of half-caste brats come along, and he doesn't know whether they are his own or not."

"It is more than that," was the caustic reply. "Men with white wives have worry enough; and a man can go gay in the tea-houses, and none the worse. But when once they marry them it is like signing a bond with the devil. That man's damned, that's all."

Geoffrey rose and left the room. He thought on the whole it was better to withdraw than to hit the harsh-voiced Yankee hard in the eye. He felt that his wife had been insulted. But the speaker could not have known by whom he had been overheard. He had merely expressed an opinion which, as a sudden instinct told Geoffrey, must be generally prevalent among the white people living in this yellow country.

Now that he came to think of it, he remembered curious glances cast at him and Asako by foreigners and also, strange to say, by Japanese, glances half contemptuous. Had he acquired it already, that expression which marked the faces of the unfortunates at the Kobe Club? He remembered also tactless remarks on board ship, such as, "Mrs. Barrington has lived all her life in England; of course, that makes all the difference."

Force of Advice

Geoffrey looked at his reflection in the long mirror in the hall. There were no signs as yet of premature damnation on the honest, healthy British face. There were signs, perhaps, of ripened thought and experience, but of no superficial appreciation. The eyes seemed to have withdrawn deeper into their sockets, like the figurines in toy barometers when they feel wet weather coming.

He was beginning to appreciate the force of the advice which had urged him to beware of Japan. Here, in the hotbed of race prejudice, evil spirits were aboard. It was so different in broad-hearted tolerant London.

Asako was charming and rich. She was received everywhere. To marry her was no more strange than to marry a French girl or a Russian. They would have lived peaceably in Europe; and her distant fatherland would have added a pathetic charm to her personality.

But here in Japan, where between the handful of whites and the myriads of yellow men stretches a No Man's Land, serrated and desolate, marked with bloody flights, with suspicions and treacheries, Asako's position as the wife of a white man and Geoffrey's position as the husband of a yellow wife were entirely different. The stranger's phrases had summed up the situation. They were no good, these whitemen who had pawned their lives to yellow girls.

They were the failures, the rates. Geoffrey had heard of promising young officers in India who had married native women and who had had to leave the service. He had done the same. Better go gay in the tea-houses with Wigram. He was the husband of a colored woman.

And then the crowd of half-caste brats? In England one hardly ever thinks of the progeny of mixed races. That bitter word "half caste" is a distant echo of sensational novels. But here, in heavy experiment, whose seed, they say, is lost in the third generation. But he had heard the tone of scorn which flung at them; and it suddenly occurred to him that his own children would be half-castes.

On the Terrace

He was walking on the garden terrace overlooking the starry city. He was thinking with an intensity unfamiliar to him and terrifying, like a machine which is developing its full power, and is shaking a framework unused to such a strain. He wanted a friend's presence, a desultory chat with an old pal about people and things which they shared in common. Thank God, Reggie Forsyth was in Tokyo. He would leave tomorrow. He must see Reggie, laugh at his queer clever talk again, relax himself and feel sane.

He was nervous of meeting his wife, lest her instinct might guess his thoughts. Yet he must not leave her any longer or his absence would make her anxious. Not that his love for Asako had been damaged; but he felt that they were traveling along a narrow path over a bottomless gulf in an impassable country.

He returned to the rooms and found her lying disconsolate on a sofa, wrapped in a flimsy champagne-colored evening gown, one of the spoils of Paris.

"You didn't like me as a Jap, and you've been thinking terrible things about me," she said at last, and tell me what you have been thinking."

"Little Yum Yum talks great nonsense, sometimes. As a matter of fact, I was thinking of going on to Tokyo tomorrow. I think we've seen about all there is to be seen here, don't you?"

"Geoffrey, you want to see Reggie Forsyth. You're getting bored and homesick already."

"No, I'm not. I think it is a ripping country; in fact, I want to see more of it. What I am wondering is whether we should take Tanaka."

Asako Laughed

This made Asako laugh. Any mention of Tanaka's name acted as a talisman of mirth. Tanaka was the obsequious guide who had fixed himself on to their company in Nagasaki, with a fine flair for locks and profitable travelers.

He was a very small man, small even for a Japanese, but plump withal. At first view looked like that of a little boy, an illusion accentuated by the shortness of his coat and his small straw boater with its colored ribbon. Even when he turned the illusion was not quite dispelled; for his was a round, ruddy, chubby face with dimples, a face with big cheeks ripe for smacking, and little sunken pig-like eyes.

He had stalked the Barringtons during their first excursion on foot through the ancient city, knowing that sooner or later they would lose their way. When the opportunity offered itself and he saw them gazing vaguely round at cross-roads, he bore down upon them, raising his hat and saying:

"Can I assist you, sir?"

"Yes; would you kindly tell me the way to the Miyako Hotel?" asked Geoffrey.

"I am myself enroute," answered Tanaka. "Indeed we meet very a propos."

On the way he had discovered about all there was to be seen in Kyoto. Only, visitors must know their way about, or must have the service of an experienced guide who was au fait and who knew the "open sesame," and it was not until late that night that its meaning dawned upon Geoffrey.

Rich Collection

Tanaka had a rich collection of foreign and idiomatic phrases which he must have learned by heart from a book and with which he adorned his conversation.

On his own initiative he had appeared next morning to re-conduct the two visitors to the Emperor's palace, which he gave them to understand was open for that day only, and as a special privilege due to Tanaka's influence. While expatiating on the wonders to be seen, he brushed Geoffrey's clothes and arranged them with the care of a trained valet. In the evening when they returned to the hotel and Asako complained of pains in her shoulder, Tanaka showed him self to be an adept at massage.

Next morning he was again at his post; and Geoffrey realized that another member had been added to his household. He acted as their dicerone or "saseron," as he pronounced it, to temple treasuries and old palace gardens, to curio-shops and to little native eating houses. The Barringtons submitted, not because they liked Tanaka, but because they were good-natured, and rather lost in this new country. Besides, Tanaka clung like a leech and was useful in many ways.

Observation Method

Only on Sunday morning it was the hotel boy who brought their early morning tea. Tanaka was absent. When he made his appearance he wore a grave expression which hardly suited his round face; and he carried a large black prayer book. He explained that he had been to church. He was a Christian, Greek Orthodox. At least so he said, but afterwards Geoffrey was inclined to think that this was only one of his mystifications to gain the sympathy of his victims and to create a bond between him and them.

His method was one of observation, imitation and concealed interrogation. The long visits to the Barrington rooms, the time spent in clothes brushing and in message were so much opportunity gained for inspecting the two and for inhabitants, for gauging their habits and their income, and for scheming out how to derive the greatest possible advantage for himself.

The first results of this process were almost unconscious. The wide collar, in which his face had wobbled. Micawber-like, disappeared, and a small double collar like the kind Geoffrey wore, took its place. The garish necktie and headband were replaced by discreet black. He acquired the attitudes and gestures of his employer in a few days.

As for the cross-examination, it took place in the evening, when Geoffrey was tired, and Tanaka was taking off his boots.

"Previous to the fiances," Tanaka began, "did Lady Barrington like long time in Japan?"

He was lavish with titles, considering that money and nobility in such people must be inseparable; besides, experience had taught him that the use of such honorifics never came amiss.

Quite a Baby

"Ladyship has Japanese name?"

"Asako Fujinami. Do you know the name, Tanaka?"

"Yes, from Tokyo."

"Does Lordship pay his devoir to relatives of Ladyship?"

"Yes, I suppose so, when we go to Tokyo."

"Ladyship's relatives have noble residence?" asked Tanaka; it was his way of inquiring if they were rich.

"I really don't know at all," answered Geoffrey.

"Then I will detect for Lordship. It will be better. A man can do great foolishness if he does not detect."

After this Geoffrey discouraged Tanaka. But Asako thought him a huge joke. He made himself very useful and agreeable, fetching and carrying for, her, and amusing her with his wonderful English. He almost succeeded in dodging Tiltine from her cares for her mistress' person. Geoffrey had once objected, on being expelled from his wife's bedroom during a change of raiment:

"But Tanaka was there. You don't mind him seeing you apparently."

Asako had burst out laughing.

"Oh, he isn't a man. He isn't real at all. He says that I am like a flower, and that I am very beautiful in 'deshabeol.'"

Sense of Power

Perhaps, indeed as she was, Asako enjoyed playing off Tanaka against her husband, just as it certainly amused her to watch the jealousy between Tiltine and the Japanese. It gave her a pleasant sense of power to see her big husband look so indignant.

"Oh, about eighteen or nineteen," she answered. She was not yet used to the deceptiveness of Japanese appearances.

"He does not look more sometimes," said her husband; "but he has the ways and the experience of a very old hand. I wouldn't mind betting you that he is fifty."

"All right," said Asako, "give me the Jade Buddsha if you are wrong."

"And what will you give me if I am right?" said Geoffrey.

"Kisses," replied his wife.

Geoffrey went out to look for Tanaka. In a quarter of an hour he came back, triumphant.

"My kisses, sweetheart," he demanded.

Two Days Later

"Wait," said Asako; "how old is he?"

"I went out of the front door and there was Master Tanaka, telling the rickshaw-men the latest gossip about us. I said to him, 'Tanaka, are you married?' 'Yes, Lordship,' he answered, 'I am a widower.' 'Any children?' I asked again. 'I have two progenies,' he said; 'they are soldiers of His Majesty the Emperor.' 'Why, how old are you?' I asked. 'Forty-three years,' he answered. 'You are very well preserved for a man of your age,' I said, and I have come back for my kisses."

Two days later, early in the morning, they left Kyoto by the great metal high road of Japan which has replaced the famous way known as the Tokaido, sacred in history, legend and art. Every stone has its message for Japanese eyes, every tree its association with poetry or romance. Even among Western connoisseurs of Japanese wood engraving its fifty-two resting places are as familiar as the Stations of the Cross. Such is the Takaido, the road between the two capitals of Kyoto and Tokyo, still haunted by the ghosts of the Emperor's ox-drawn wagons, the Shoguns' lacquered palanquins, by feudal warriors in their clear-blue armor, and by the swinging strides of the samurai.

"Look, look, Fujiyama!"

"There was a movement in the observation-car, where Geoffrey and his wife were watching the unfolding of their new country. The sea was away to the right beyond the tea-fields and the pine-woods. To the left was the base of a mountain. Its summit was wrapped in cloud.

From the fragment visible it was possible to appreciate the architecture of the whole—ex pede Herculem. It took the train quite one hour to travel over that arc of the circuit of Fuji, which it must pass on its way to Tokyo. During this time, the curtained presence of the great mountain dominated the landscape. Everything seemed to lead up to that mantle of cloud.

The terraced rice fields rose towards it, the trees slanted towards it, the moorland seemed to be pulled upwards, and the skin of the earth was stretched taut over some giant limb which had pushed itself up from below, the calm sea was waiting for its reflection, and even the microscopic train seemed to swing in its orbit round the mountain like an unwilling satellite.

"It's a pity we can't see it," said Geoffrey.

One Big Thing

"Yes, it's the only big thing in the whole darned country," said a saturnine American, sitting opposite; "and then, when you get on to it, it's just a heap of cinders."

Asako was not worrying about the landscape. Her thoughts were directed to a family of well-to-do Japanese, first-class passengers, who had settled in the observation car for half an hour or so, and had then withdrawn. There was a father, his wife and two daughters, wax-like figures who did not utter a word but glided shadow-like in and out of the compartment. Were they relations of hers?

Then, when she and her husband passed down the corridor train to lunch, and through the swarming second-class carriages, she wondered once more, as she saw male Japan sprawling its length over the seats in the ugliest attitudes of repose, and female Japan squatting monkey-like and cleaning ears and nostrils with scraps of paper or wiping stolid babies. The carriages swarmed with children, with luggage and litter. The floors were a mess of spilled tea, broken earthenware cups and splintered wooden boxes. Cheap baggage was piled up everywhere, with wicker baskets, paper parcels, bundles of dun-colored wraps, and cases of imitation leather. Among this debris children were playing unchecked, smearing their faces with rice cakes and squashing the flies on the window pane.

Asako Shuddered

Were any of these her relatives? Asako shuddered. How much did she actually know about these far-away cousins? She could just remember her father. She could recall great brown shining eyes, and a thin face, wasted by the consumption which killed him, and a tenderness of voice and manner to place her quite apart from anything which she had ever experienced since. This soon came to an end.

After that she had known only the conscientiously chilly care of the Muratas. They had told her that her mother had died when she was born, and that her father was so unhappy that he had left Japan forever. Her father was a very clever man. He had read all the English and French and German books. He had left special word when he was dying that Asako was not to go back to Japan, that Japanese men were bad to women, that she was to be brought up among French girls and that she was to marry a European or an American.

But the Muratas could not tell her any intimate details about her father, whom they had not known very well. Again, although they were aware that she had rich cousins living in Tokio, they did not know them personally and could tell her nothing.

Her father had left no papers, only his photograph, the picture of a delicate, sad-faced man in black cloak and kimono, and a little French book called Pensees de Pascal, at the end of which was written the address of Mr. Ito, the lawyer in Tokyo through whom the dividends were paid, and that of "my cousin Fujinami Gentaro."

CHAPTER VII.
The Embassy

Tsuyu no yo no
Tsuyu no yo nagara
Sari nagara!
White this dewdrop world
Yet—all the same!—

THE fabric of our lives is like a piece of knitting, terribly botched and bungled in most cases. There are stitches which are dropped, sometimes to be swallowed up and forgotten in the superstructure, sometimes to be picked up again after a lapse of years. These stitches are old friendships.

The first stitch from Geoffrey's bachelor days to be worked back into the scheme of his married life was his friendship for Reggie Forsyth, who had been best man at his wedding and who had since then been appointed Secretary to the Embassy at Tokyo.

Reggie had received a telegram saying that Geoffrey was coming. He was very pleased. He had reached the stage in the progress of exile where one is inordinately happy to see any old friend. In fact, he was beginning to be "fed up" with Japan, with its very limited distractions, and with the monotony of his diplomatic collleagues.

Instead of going to the tennis court, which was his usual afternoon occupation, he had spent the time in arranging his rooms, shifting the furniture, rehanging the pictures, paying especial care to the disposition of his Oriental curios, his recent purchases, his last enthusiasms in this land of languor. Reggie collected Buddhas, Chinese snuff bottles and lacquered medicine cases—called inro in Japanese.

Design of Fishes

"Caviare to the general!" murmured Reggie, as he gloated over a chaste design of fishes in mother-of-pearl, a pseudo-Korin. "Poor old Geoffrey! He's only a barbarian; but perhaps she will be interested. Here, To!" he called out to an impassive Japanese manservant, "have the flowers come yet, and the little trees?"

To produced from the back regions of the house a quantity of dwarf trees, planted as miniature landscapes in shallow porcelain dishes, and big fronds of budding cherry blossom.

Reggie arranged the blossom in a triumphal arch over the corner table, where stood the silent company of the Buddhas. From among the trees he chose his favorite, a kind of dwarf cedar, to place between the window, opening on to a sunny veranda, and an old gold screen, across whose tender glory wound the variegated comicality of an Emperor's traveling procession, painted by a Kano artist of three centuries ago.

His removed the books which were lying about the room—grim Japanese grammars, and forbidden works on international law, and in their place he left volumes of poetry and memoirs, and English picture-papers strewn about in artistic disorder. Then he gave the silver frames of his photographs to To to be polished, the photographs of fair women signed with Christian names, of diplomats in grand uniforms, and of handsome foreigners.

He Was Amused

Having reduced the serious atmosphere of his study so as to give an impression of amiable indolence, Reggie forsyth lit a cigarette and strolled out into the garden, amused at his own impatience. In London he would never have been stirred himself for old Geoffrey Barrington, who was only a Philistine after all, with no sense of the inwardness of things.

Reggie was a slim and graceful young man, with thin fair hair brushed flat back from his forehead. A certain projection of bones under the face gave him an almost Mongolian look, but his dancing blue eyes seemed to be never still. He wore a suit of navy serge, fitting close to his figure, black tie, and grey spats. In fact, he was as immaculate as a young officer on leave from India.

Outside his broad verandas was a gravel path, and beyond that a Japanese garden, the hobby of one of his predecessors, a miniature domain of hillocks and shrubs, with the inevitable pebbly water course, in which a bronze crane was perpetually fishing. Over the red-brick wall which encircles the Embassy compound the reddish buds of a cherry avenue were bursting in white stars.

This compound of the Embassy is a fragment of British soil. The British flag floats over it; and the Japanese authorities have no power within its walls. Its large population of Japanese servants, about 150 in all, are free from the burden of Japanese taxes; and, since the police may not enter, gambling, forbidden throughout the Empire, flourishes there; and the rambling servants' quarters behind the ambassador's house are the Monte Carlo of the Tokio bette (coachman) and kurumaya (rickshaw runner).

However, since the alarming discovery that a professional burglar had, Dogberry-like, been occupying an old tub in a corner of the wide grounds, a policeman has been allowed to patrol the garden; but he has to drop that omnipotent swagger which marks his progress outside the walls.

For immediate and permanent relief from eczema I prescribe

Resinol

"If you want to experiment, try some of those things you talk about. But if you want that itching stopped and your skin healed, I advise you to get a jar of Resinol Ointment, and a cake of Resinol Soap. We doctors have been prescribing that treatment ever since you were a small boy, so we know what it will do. It is cooling, soothing, easy and economical to use, and rarely fails to overcome eczema and similar affections."

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

An official of the United States Steel Corporation informs me that the seven-day week has been completely abolished throughout all its plants for quite a long time.

This is encouraging news.

* * *

One bleak November evening a poor but ambitious young London clerk, who in his spare moments had contrived to learn shorthand, stood on the dingy underground railway platform at Kings Cross waiting for a train to take him to the home of Thomas Gibson Bowles, proprietor and editor of Vanity Fair, where he was hired out his two dollars a week salary by earning a few shillings as stenographer after his regular day's work was done.

To while away the time during the drab ride on London's "sewer" the lad resolved to buy something to read, and his choice fell upon an American magazine, the old Scribner's, now the Century Magazine. It chanced to contain an article on the electrical experiences and achievements of one Thomas A. Edison, then hardly known in Europe. The writer was Francis R. Upton, one time Mr. Edison's aides, and the story he told was fascinating.

Not very long after this the real estate agent and auctioneer for whom the clerk worked decided that he could cut expenses by engaging a "article" clerk—an apprentice who would serve for nothing. So the paid clerk answered a "situation vacant" advertisement in the London Times.

The advertiser turned out to be Colonel George E. Gouraud, the English representative of Edison and the resident director in London of the Mercantile Trust Company of New York, then owned by the Equitable Life. Col. Gouraud was favorably impressed by the youth's enterprise and experience, for in addition to his daily task and his shorthand writing for the famous Bowles, he had found time to do secretarial work for Sir George Campbell, a noted member of Parliament.

He was engaged as Colonel Gouraud's secretary—and then resolved to strive to become secretary to Edison himself, the wonder working hero of the magazine story.

In his new position with Colonel Gouraud, he not only did his full day's work, but, as a result, stepping stone toward his goal, made himself useful at night to Edison's technical representative in England. E. H. Johnson, who was then assisting in the formation of the Edison Telephone Company in London. To Mr. Johnson he confided his ambition.

The abilities, enthusiasm and the inordinate energy of the young secretary began to be noted by Americans visiting the Edison headquarters and before long he received an attractive offer from the most prominent international banking house in America to come to New York. Accordingly he would have diverted him from his purpose so he refused the proffered position.

One day the cable brought the message he had awaited for and worked for. Thomas A. Edison wanted him as his private secretary.

Who do you think the youth was?

WABASH RAILWAY CO.

To I. L., Congress street,—Chairman William H. Wilcox of Wabash Railway Co. calls me now: "The corporate earnings of the Company for each year since its organization in 1915 have shown a substantial surplus over all interest and other fixed charges.

"The Company's property was operated by the Federal Government from January 1, 1918, to February 28, 1920, and while it received such operation for the year 1919, to which you refer, showed a deficit for the Director General, for payment of the rents to this Company by the Government for the use of its property was in excess of the amount required to meet all its fixed charges, and the corporate results for the year 1920 were substantially the same for the same reasons and through the Government guarantee for the six months ending August 31, 1920.

"For the year 1921, however, the Company's operation of its property shows a surplus of $1,231,000 after payment of all fixed charges.

"There are at the present time $38,881,000 of First Mortgage bonds outstanding, which are a first lien on about 1631 miles of the 2640.74 miles owned by the Company.

U. S. Tax Revision Plans Used to Help Bears Drive Down Prices of Stocks

RAILROADS OFF FROM 1 TO 2 POINTS

Resumption of Friday's heavy selling movement took place in the week-end stock market, prices in all sections of the list being depressed one to more than 6 points.

Selling was influenced by overnight Washington dispatches indicating the pressing of tax revision proposals in the new Congress which would involve an import on the undistributed surplus of corporations and would also affect stock dividends.

U. S. Steel gave way around 2 points.

Railroad group leaders were depressed one to two points. Reading, St. Paul preferred and New York Central yielded around two points. Several rails gave way more than a point, among them New Haven, Lehigh Valley, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Baltimore & Ohio and Great Northern.

Baldwin gave way around 4 and Standard Oil of New Jersey 3.

Pullman yielded 1¾ and Westinghouse 1. Lack of support in Crucible caused it to react 2¾ points, while Republic sold off 1¾ and Bethlehem B and U. S. Steel, 1 each.

Du Pont broke more than 6, apparently in reflection of speculative disappointment that no immediate increase in dividends is contemplated on the new stock.

Other conspicuous weak stocks were American Locomotive, Fisher Body, Studebaker, Corn Products, Coca Cola, Market Street Railway prior preferred, United Retail Stores, U. S. Alcohol, Continental Can, Houston Oil, Davison Chemical, Allied Chemical, Butte & Superior, Federal Mining & Smelting preferred all down 1 to 4 points.

BANK CLEARINGS IN BOSTON UP

Bank clearings at leading cities of the United States for the week ending November 9 (a holiday week) as reported to Bradstreet's Journal, aggregate $6,040,624,000, a loss of 15.7 per cent. from last week, but a gain of 10.6 per cent, over this week last year.

Outside of New York the total is $2,768,024, a decrease of 6.5 per cent. from last week, but an increase of 12.9 per cent. over this week last year. New York shows a rise of 9.1 per cent. over last year. Thirty-five cities show a gain over last year, while seven exhibit losses. Chicago reports a gain of 4.8 per cent; Boston, 12.2; San Francisco 6.1; Los Angeles 17 and Minneapolis 3.8 per cent.

MORE STOCK MELONS ARE ON THE WAY

Increase of Lawyers Title and Trust Company stock from $4,000,000 to $6,000,000 has been approved by directors, new stock to be issued as a 50 per cent. stock dividend.

Proposal to increase capital of Fidelity and Casualty Company from $2,000,000 to $4,000,000, new stock to be issued as a 100 per cent. stock dividend, will be voted on by stockholders November 20. If increase is authorized, reduction of par from $100 to $25 per share will also be effected.

Increase in capital from $250,000 to $550,000, by issuance of a 120 per cent. stock dividend, will be submitted to stockholders of United States Guarantee Company at a special meeting November 22.

CONNECTICUT FIRM TO PAY 300 P. C.

The J. B. Williams Company of Hartford, Ct., has called a special meeting of stockholders to ratify proposal of directors to increase capital stock from $250,000 to $1,000,000. If ratification is given, a stock dividend of 300 per cent. will be declared. Company's original capital was $100,000, and about fifteen years ago it was increased to the present amount.

SAYS FARMER IS SHREWD BUYER

Montgomery Ward & Co. received in first ten months $1,900,000 against $,900,000 in corresponding period last year. Average order in the past four months was $6.15, increase 28 per cent. President Marseles says:

"We are quite satisfied with business prospects. In view of the fact that purchases by the farmer are of the sort that are unavoidable. Player pianos, jewelry and parlor furniture have little part in our sales records at this time, nor are we selling any important volume of fencing, agricultural implements and other essentials. The farmer of today is the shrewdest shopper. He is learning to value prices in terms of purchasing power of the bushel of wheat or the fat steer. He will do no reckless buying, and will purchase no luxuries until his commodities are relatively as valuable as they were in the days he calls 'normal.'"

RAILROADS CARRY FEWER PASSENGERS

Number of passengers carried by railroads in August $3,742,000, against 90,000,000 same month a year ago. Passenger revenue was $101,298,912, against $108,921,538 and freight revenue $436,538,210, compared with $362,319,616.

BOND OFFERINGS FOR WEEK ARE GIVEN

Bond offerings of past week totaled $62,647,000 as follows: State and municipal, $6,672,000; public utility, $19,975,000; industrial, $13,000,000; foreign, $18,000,000; railroad, $4,000,000; land bank, $1,000,000.

British Financing

Tenders will be received November 7 for British Treasury bills and bonds to maximum total of £40,000,000, bonds not to exceed £5,000,000.

AUTO OUTPUT FOR 1922 IS HIGH

Not only has October, with its estimated output of 244,000 cars and trucks, been the seventh consecutive month of the year to show production in excess of 200,000, but it has brought the figure for the ten month period to within a few thousand of the total output for the best previous year in the production history of the industry, says Automotive Industries.

Thus far the aggregate for 1922 is 2,119,227, as compared with 2,205,197 in 1920.
